Strike Bill Toughened To Provide Lewis Curb

Senate and House Conferees Aim At Prevention of New Coal Walkout

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

House and Senate conferees yesterday toughened the already stiff criminal penalty provisions of the Connally-Smith antistrike bills in a move directed squarely at U. M. W. Chief John L. Lewis.

Quick agreement was reached on this noncontroversial heart section of both the House and the Senate bills. Other features of the broader gauge House measure were left in dispute.

Before accepting the iron-knuckled prohibition against strikes in any Government-owned plant—directly applicable to any resumption of the coal strike on June 20—the conferees added more teeth.

New language was inserted penalizing anyone who "agreed with or encouraged" other persons to strike in a Government operated war plant.

Loopholes Closed

The addition closed possible loopholes in the language of the bills as they passed both Houses. These made it a punishable offense to coerce, instigate or induce any person to strike in a Government plant, or to aid in the strike by guiding it, or by paying strike or other benefits to men on walkout.

Conferees approved fines up to $5000 and jail sentences up to one year for violation of this section.

In effect the conference action amounted to approval of the Connally bill in much the same form that it passed the Senate. Informed Capitol leaders say they have reason to believe the President will sign the Connally bill provisions, but may draw the line at the more general labor restrictions carried in the House-approved version.

WLB Strengthened

Restored to the bill before conferees concluded their first session was specific authority for the President to take over strike-bound plants, an item which the House had deleted. Also approved was statutory authorization for a strengthened War Labor Board, including the long-needed power of subpena.

But a conference fight broke out around House-approved Smith bill provisions for 30-day strike notice and a Government-conducted secret ballot before a strike could be called. It appeared probable that both of these provisions would be dropped from the bill before it is finally approved.

Senate conferees, led by Senator Van Nuys, (Democrat), of Indiana, are said to have argued that this would be tantamount to telling workers they had a right to strike if they used the strike notice and secret ballot approach.

War, Navy and Maritime commission officials had similarly opposed these provisions, contend-

Illinois Coal Operators Bow To Lewis, Offer $1.50 Day Rise

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

Illinois coal operators yesterday strengthened John L. Lewis' position by offering 23,000 a $1.50 a day increase to settle the "portal-to-portal" pay dispute in that State, but Washington negotiations between miners and operators were reported in such a deadlock that the controversy was to be sent back to the War Labor Board tomorrow.

Former Senator Edward R. Burke, spokesman for the Southern Appalachian bituminous coal operators declared, the Associated Press reported late last night:

"There is not any basis for reaching a settlement unless the miners recede from their present demands (including the $1.50 portal-to-portal increase), and Lewis has given no indication that he will do that."

He said that "We're going to report the situation to the War Labor Board on Wednesday. We will have to report that we cannot reach a settlement." Burke said that Charles O'Neill, representing the Northern operators was in accord with him that a settlement could not be reached by direct negotiations. O'Neill, however, said he would "rather wait until tomorrow before saying anything.

Except in some scattered localities, virtually all the country's coal miners returned to work yesterday in compliance with the President's back-to-work order and a similar directive from the United Mine Workers' policy committee.

Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, Government operator of the mines, called on Lewis "to do your part" to secure a resumption of work in three Pennsylvania mines where the men stayed out in spite of the back-to-work orders.

The announcement of the offer of the Illinois operators was made in Chicago by Gov. Dwight H. Green while miners and operators for the northern and southern Appalachian groups were conferring in Washington. Illinois operators do not participate in the Appalachian conference, but since it represents the bulk of the country's production, it has generally set the rates for the entire country.

It was understood that the Illinois proposal was not final—but was subject to approval by the U. M. W. International Executive Board and could be changed later to conform with any settlement reached by the Appalachian conference.

Meanwhile, however, Harry Moses, oresident of the H. C. Frick Coal Co., giant captive mine operations of the United States Steel Corp., announced that he would "not be bound" by the Illinois offer, even though U. S. Steel has one mine in the State. Moses termed the action "ill-advised," and added that he would

The Ram Battles On

By Relman Morin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 7.—Tearing apart the Axis air opposition at the rate of 19 enemy planes destroyed to one Allied craft lost, thundering squadrons of Allied bombers and fighter-bombers held the Italian islands and Italy herself under almost unbroken attack over the week-end.

Communiques issued today briefly told a story of the Italian Mediterranean island defenses, against both sides of the Messina Strait of Mussolini's homeland.

Allied planes from North Africa and the Middle East threw their greatest raids against Pantelleria, but Sicily and the mainland ports of Messina, San Giovanni and Reggio Calabria were hard hit as well.

Diversified Attack

The Allies threw in virtually every sort of plane in the great force built up along the shores of Africa — Wellingtons, Fortresses, Liberators, Baltimores, Bostons, Marauders, Mitchells, P-40s, Spitfires.

They met considerable German fighter strength, particularly over Pantelleria, but they smashed through every enemy formation, downing 16 fighters, two bombers and one transport at the cost of a single Allied plane.

The biggest single blow dealt the enemy's fighter strength was struck by 50 Liberators of the Middle East command which went over to pound Messina, Reggio Calabria and San Giovanni. Without loss, they blew out of the sky at least eight Axis planes, and in all probability three more, of an enemy force of about 30.

Pantelleria, a strip of Axis ground that week on end has shaken in flames under Allied bombs, was hit first by heavy bombers and then by mediums and fighter-bombers, eight enemy fighters being shot down.

Railroad Yards Hit

At Messina, the railroads yards were sprayed with bombs, and explosives fell also in the vicinity of the power station, naval barracks and oil tanks. Bomb bursts lighted up Reggio Calabria's harbor area; the ferry terminal at San Giovanni was squarely hit.

Ramirez New Argentine Chief As Rawson Quits In Dispute; 'Present Policy' Is 'Neutral'

Leader Promises To Cooperate With Other Nations In Hemisphere

By the Associated Press

Montevideo, June 7.—Gen. Pedro Ramirez succeeded Gen. Arturo Rawson as head of Argentina's new provisional government today and, after reshuffling the cabinet in a series of moves which liberals hoped would make for a less reactionary regime, he declared that his country's policy would be one of friendship toward American peoples and of neutrality toward others.

In a speech broadcast from Buenos Aires immediately after he was sworn in as President tonight, Ramirez said he intended to follow a "cordial policy toward American peoples with whom we have been united since times past."

"As regards other countries," he added, "Argentina's policy is at present that of neutrality."

"The destinies of the Argentines have been placed by circumstances in the hands of a soldier who will rule with rectitude, human sense and firmness."

Policy Change Conjectured

[The International News Service said that he emphasized Argentina's "loyal cooperation" with all the Americas in accordance with existing pacts, and that this was taken to mean that it would follow the recommendations of the Rio de Janeiro conference and break with Axis.]

Upon hearing Ramirez's broadcast, one foreign office source wondered whether the phrase, "at present," might conceivably be taken as meaning that the future policy will be different. He added that Ramirez obviously referred to Germany, Italy and Japan in his mention of "other countries."

Four Cabinet Members Quit

Rawson resigned suddenly early today and four ultraconservative members of his cabinet had followed him in resignation.

This brought hope to the pro-Democrats and they looked for an early statement of the Ramirez government affirming a pro-Democratic foreign policy. There was some disappointment, however, that such a statement was not made during the oath-taking ceremony tonight.

The Argentine supreme court gave immediate recognition to the provisional government tonight, basing its decision on similar action taken in the 1930 revolution.

Rawson himself announced in Buenos Aires that he was compelled to resign a few hours before he was scheduled to be sworn in as president because of "the impossibility of reaching an agreement on the constitution of a new cabinet."

'Neutrality! Neutrality!'

Then came the reports of the resignations of four designated cabinet members—Foreign Minister Gen. Domingo Martinez, Finance Minister Jose Maria Rosa, Public Works Minister Juan Pistarini and Horace Caderon, Minister

Heavy Bomber Output Grew 18% in April

By the Associated Press

Heavy bombers to carry the war to the enemy came off American assembly lines in record volume in April and "extensive new facilities" are being made ready to place even greater emphasis on their manufacture.

In his monthly report on munitions production, Chairman Donald M. Nelson of the War Production Board said yesterday the output of heavy bombers in April was 18 per cent above March.

While he did not announce production in numbers, the increases indicated production of about 600 four-engine bombers in April, since Nelson previously had announced that the March production exceeded 500 for the first time.

As greater emphasis is placed on heavy bombers, Nelson said, exten-

Roosevelt Asks Full Life For All Men

Urges Better Use Of World Resources 'Without Exploitation By Any Nation'

(Text on Page 6.)

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt warned yesterday against "exploitation by any nation" of natural and human resources in the postwar world.

The President's statement, made before the 44 delegations which attended the United Nations Food Conference at Hot Springs, Va., was a departure from his prepared speech. It drew hearty applause from the 400 or so delegates who were gathered in the East Room of the White House.

Mr. Roosevelt, wearing a seersucker suit and looking very fit, spoke from a specially constructed rostrum, flanked by the Stars and Stripes and the Presidential emblem.

He told the delegates, who represented 80 per cent of the world's two billion inhabitants, that they had brought new hope to the world that "freedom from want and freedom from fear" will be attained.

The goal in the field of agriculture and food, he said, could not be achieved without action in other fields, such as industrial production, trade barriers and international exchange.

"The better use of natural and human resources must be assured to improve living standards," Mr. Roosevelt said.

Then, looking up from his manuscript, he added the emphasis that the better use of these resources must be "without exploitation by any nation."

More Applause

The Russians, Chinese, Ethiopians, Britons, Frenchmen and other delegates fitted easily into the famous old East Room, with its great candelabra, its oil portraits of George Washington and Martha Washington, and its antique piano.

Mrs. Roosevelt, wearing a light blue dress sat in a front row with Vice President Wallace, Secretary of State Hull, Assistant Secretary Berle and Judge Marvin Jones, chairman of the American delegation to the Food Conference.

The first applause from the delegates came when President Roosevelt said the Hot Springs conference had demonstrated that "the United Nations really are united—not only for the prosecution of the war, but for the solution of the many and difficult problems

14 Take Helm As a Cabinet To Rule French

Vague Announcement Names De Gaulle, Giraud Co-Presidents

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Algiers, June 7.—The French Committee of National Liberation officially announced formation of a cabinet of 14 members tonight to act as the governing agency until a provisional government is established upon liberation of the home country.

The announcement came at the end of a day of rumors and, coming in three separate communiques, was vague in some respects. It also spoke of the formation of a war committee "to assure general conduct of the war."

At this stage, the committee was disclosed to consist of 14 members—11 cabinet members, Co-Presidents Generals Charles de Gaulle and Henri Giraud, and Gen. Alphonse Georges, who is said to be slated to become minister without portfolio. He is the only one of the original seven members of the committee not listed for a department and it appeared he is to be sidetracked because of his age and his opposition to De Gaulle.

Official Line-Up

The official make-up of the new cabinet is:

Foreign affairs—Rene Massigli.

Armaments—Jean Monnet.

Colonies—Rene Pleven.

Communications and merchant marine—Rene Meyer.

Interior—Andre Philip.

Finance—Maurice Couve de Murville.

Production and commerce—Andrew Diethelm.

Labor and social affairs—Adrien Tixier, now reported in Washington.

The committee appointed Gabriel Puaux, former high commissioner of Syria, as successor to Gen. Auguste Nogues as resident-general of Morocco, and named Jean Hel-

U. S. Blasts Japs on Kiska, In Solomons

Bases of Enemy Are Hit Hard Without Loss to Us

American airmen, braving bad weather, pounded Japanese bases in the Aleutians and Solomons over the weekend, the Navy reported yesterday.

Torpedo and dive-bombers, escorted by Wildcat fighters, attacked the Jap air base at Munda in the central Solomons June 6. Results were not observed, apparently due to the weather, but all of the United States planes returned.

The same day fighters strafed positions on Choiseul Island, in middle Solomons. Jap gun emplacements were silenced. No planes were lost.

Bombers also attacked Kiska, but results could not be observed.

Allies Blast New Guinea

Allied Headquarters in Australia (Tuesday), June 8 (AP).—Allied bombers struck yesterday at Japanese New Guinea bases, hitting Madang and Lae and attacking enemy troop positions at Mubo, the high command announced.

Wewak, which recently took 74 tons of bombs in four heavy raids, was another New Guinea target. All the raids were on a light scale.

3 Air Routes From West Authorized

CAB Sanctions Proposal; Army's Approval Awaited

Three additional air routes into Washington from the West have been authorized by the Civil Aeronautics Board and will be put into service as soon as the Army certifies that their operation will not "interfere with the war program," it was announced yesterday.

A United Airlines spokesman, Karl P. Hughes, traffic manager, stated that there will be no demand for additional equipment or pilots for the new service but that it could be established "by reducing other, less important routes." He expressed the belief that the new service will start soon and relieve the hard-pressed air transportation situation in the Nation's Capital.

Routes Listed

Permission for operation of the following routes has been granted:

Nonstop between Toledo and Washington by United Airlines Transport Corp.; between Dayton and Washington, via Columbus, Ohio, and Wheeling, W. Va., by Transcontiental & Western Air, Inc.; and between Lexington and Washington, via Frankfort-Lexington, Ky., and Charleston, W. Va., by Eastern Air Lines, Inc.

Eastern is the only one of these lines now operating into Washington. Pennsylvania Central and American Air Lines operate from the Capital north and westward and, at present, establish connections with all points farther west through a "shuttle" service.

Application Denied

An application for a route between Washington and St. Louis was denied by the board to T. W. A.

Meanwhile, the growing development of air transport was highlighted by an application of Keeshin Air Freight, Inc., to the Civil Aeronautics Board for permission to create a vast network of aerial freight lines to serve more than 200 American cities, including Washington, and points in foreign countries.

In his application, Floyd Shields, general attorney for Keeshin Freight Lines, Inc., the parent company, pointed out that the com-

Driving Ban May Be Placed On Midwest

New 'TT' Coupons To Be Tried as Blow At Black Market

Post Staff Writer

Prospects of relieving the gasoline shortage on the Eastern seaboard are so remote that the ban on pleasure driving and the cut in gas coupon values may be extended to the Middle West, according to testimony given before the special Eastern congressional bloc seeking to improve the situation here.

Meanwhile the Office of Price Administration yesterday opened a new attack on the gasoline black market by changing the ration books for commercial vehicles.

The new set of coupons will be designated "TT," and will be introduced as soon as current "T" coupons expire. Illegal gasoline markets have developed largely through the misuse of "T" coupons, and which have been an "untold" drain on gasoline supplies, are expected to be eliminated in this move, OPA said. The new coupons will become valid July 1 in areas outside the Eastern seaboard, and July 25 in the 12 States where the pleasure-driving ban is in existence.

Secretary Ickes, Petroleum Administrator for War, is expected to appear before the Congressional committee, headed by Representative Fred Hartley (Republican) of New Jersey, Thursday to give a definite answer as to whether or not PAW plans to recommend extension of the ban to the

12 Die in Crash Of Army Plane

Pope Field (Fort Bragg), N. C. June 7 (AP).—At least 12 persons were killed when a transport plane crashed between here and Laurenburg this morning, Col. Sam Price, executive officer at Pope Field said tonight.

Twelve bodies were found at the scene of the crash. It was not yet known whether the other occupants of the plane parachuted to safety.

Ample Meat Promised

Cattlemen's Subsidy Protest Is Presented at White House

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

The protest against subsidies as a means of rolling back retail prices of meat was taken to the White House yesterday by Joe Montague, counsel for the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.

Montague, who was accompanied by Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, asked that the War Meat Board be given a chance at reducing prices before the subsidy was tried.

He predicted the board could assure ample meat for civilians and the armed forces and "reduce prices below ceilings" within 40 to 50 days, if allowed to put into operation a program worked out by 103 associations of meat producers and packers.

Meantime the subsidy went into effect yesterday when slaughterers had to begin charging 10 per cent less for their products. Effects of its accompanying rollback at retail levels will be felt by consumers late this month and in early July.

The three subsidy programs planned by the Office of Price Administration—on butter, meats and coffee—will cost approximately 450 million dollars a year and will reduce the total cost of living seven-tenths of a per cent, according to OPA figures.

They are only part of a plan whereby Price Administrator Prentiss M. Brown hopes to take the cost of living figures back to those of last September 15—or 5.3 per cent.

If other portions of the plan are as expensive as the first, the cost in subsidies would be $2,385,000,000.

There are observers who anticipate the Administration will make a showdown fight to launch a subsidy program of at least this magnitude, as part of its effort to turn back the pressure for general wage increases.

Organized labor groups have asked that cost of living figures be reduced to the level of May, 1942—or 7 per cent. If this date should be aimed at and the same subsidy plan followed, the cost would be above three billion dollars.

In urging food subsidies, labor representatives and OPA economists point to British and Canadian examples.

Opponents of the idea—and they include Congressmen, trade groups

Another Top-Ranker In OPA Quits Post

Personnel changes in the Office of Price Administration reached top ranks again yesterday with the resignation of A. C. Hoffman as acting deputy administrator of food price control.

Hoffman's responsibilities will be taken over by Donald Wallace, who became acting deputy administrator of other than food prices June 1 to form a two-man control board with Hoffman taking over duties held by Dr. J. Kenneth Galbraith at the time of the latter's resignation May 31.

Hoffman, for whose resignation no reason was given, will return to the Department of Agriculture.

Gen. Marshall Back From Overseas

The War Department last night announced the return from overseas of Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff.

No details were given, but Marshall was reported to have accompanied Prime Minister Winston Churchill to North Africa for an on-the-spot review of plans to carry the war to the European continent.

Nazis Kill Hundreds as Dutch Strike to Protest Slave Labor

By the Associated Press

New York, June 7.—Hundreds and perhaps thousands of Dutch citizens were executed in reprisal for the general strike which took place in the Netherlands in late April and early May, according to information received by the Office of War Information and made public today.

Details of the strike which heretofore were prevented from reaching the outside world by the Nazi censorship were contained in a report from an OWI outpost overseas.

Despite the executions, the Dutch "revealed a remarkable solidarity," the report said, and added that as a result the "Nazi occupant must have lost his last hope of conquering the spiritual resistance of this people to National Socialism."

The strike began April 29 when Nazi authorities announced that all members of the "former Dutch army" most of whom had been freed in 1940, would be reclassified as prisoners of war and would be sent to Germany for forced labor in war plants.

Within half an hour, the OWI report asserted, cities and villages throughout the country completely changed appearance. Factories, shops and public offices closed. Buses stopped in the streets. Only automatic telephones operated and only railroad, gas, light and water services continued. Farmers left their fields, slaughtered their animals and hid the carcasses to prevent their seizure by the Nazis. Law courts suspended sessions.

Wholesale arrests began the next day, particularly in industrial centers, in an effort to break the strike.

Many of those arrested during the next few days were kept as

Chilean Cabinet Quits; President Delays Trip Here

Santiago, Chile, June 7 (AP).—Raul Morales, Minister of the Interior, resigned today and was followed by the entire cabinet, resulting in a ministerial crisis which caused President Juan Antonio Rios to postpone indefinitely his projected visit to the United States.

Morales resigned because of "attacks from members of my own (Radical) Party," he said. As is customary, the rest of the cabinet followed the head of the cabinet in a gesture of solidarity.

President Rios accepted Morales' resignation and immediately appointed a new set of ministers who took office. Rios, however, remain firm on canceling his trip in the crisis.

Prober's Opinion:

FSA Project Could Have Saved Money by Giving Land Away

James I. Hicks, investigator for a House subcommittee studying the Farm Security Administration, asserted yesterday that on one FSA project the Government could have given the land away and saved the Treasury $1,250,000.

Testifying before an agricultural subcommittee on the Roanoke Mutual Farms Association and similar FSA projects near Halifax, N. C., Hicks said FSA had invested $2,225,000 in 311 farms. "It could have bought them for $3,500 each, given them away and saved the Treasury one and a quarter million dollars. And the farmers would have been better off financially.

Hicks reported that on these North Carolina farm rehabilitation projects the large majority of farmers established there by FSA each were in debt to the agency after several years operations in amounts varying from $4,000 down to a few hundred dollars.

Representative Pace (Democrat) of Georgia, commenting on the North Carolina operations, said: "This is the sort of thing that is wrecking FSA."

"It is not fair to the farmers to be in these off-color projects," he said. "If I had been in charge of FSA and had found this rotten apple in the barrel, I would have thrown it out. It is embarrassing to those of us who are supporting FSA."

C. B. Baldwin, FSA administrator, told the committee the North Carolina projects of his agency "had not been financially sucessful," but stated they were not "typical cases of FSA farm projects and loans. He stated the average indebtedness "to the more than one million farm families to whom FSA has loaned money was about $600." He said that 92 per cent of loans made by FSA had been repaid.

Axis Looks to Spain For Allied Invasion

War Sidelights

Conspiracy In Italy Reported

Moscow, June 7 (AP).—A Tass dispatch quoted unconfirmed reports in Geneva today as saying a military conspiracy against Premier Mussolini was recently disclosed in Italy and that sensational arrests had been made among former Army officers.

"Threads of the conspiracy allegedly lead to the Quirinal (the hilltop residence of King Vittorio Emanuele)," the dispatch said.

It asserted that Gen. Rosi, who recently was removed as chief of the army staff, "is mentioned among persons implicated."

Sunken Warships Sought

London, June 7 (AP).—The Tokyo radio reported today that Japanese engineers had started efforts to raise the British battle cruiser Repulse, which was sunk by Japanese planes off the east coast of Malaya in December, 1941, together with the battleship Prince of Wales.

The broadcast, recorded by Reuters, was not confirmed by any Allied source.

(Attempts to refloat the Repulse, which went down in deep water in the Gulf of Siam after suffering severe damage, would appear to present almost unsurmountable difficulties.)

Dittmar Off Air

London, June 7 (AP).—The leading German military analyst, Lieut. Gen. Kurt Dittmar, who asserted in an outspoken broadcast last week that the period of the lightning war had passed, failed to appear on the German radio today for his weekly review.

Foreign sources suggested that last week's remarks, in which he said Germany planned a purely defensive strategy, was the reason.

A substitute said today in a broadcast that "Germany is prepared for both defensive and offensive military actions."

Soldier Develops Gunsight

Cleveland, June 7 (AP).—The effective range and accuracy of the "bazooka"—the Army's new portable gun—have been increased through sights developed by an American soldier in the Tunisian campaign, the Cleveland Ordnance District announced tonight.

Col. H. M. Reedall, head of the district, said the enterprising soldier, whose name was not disclosed, attracted attention by extraordinary accuracy. Officers found he had developed a new sight—replacing the "open sights." The sight was rushed to the United States and thousands were manufactured here within two weeks.

Italy Must Stand Under Bombing, Says Goering Paper

By Lewis Hawkins
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 7.—The Axis was at pains today to suggest that Spain might be the path of Allied invasion of Europe, reports from both Berlin and Rome taking that line.

The Allied leaders drew enemy nerves yet tauter by the bland mask thrown over their plans, and the best available information indicated that confusion was spreading in Italy.

In all the complex of whispering and propaganda overlaying Europe one of the most interesting circumstances was the fact that the Germans—who so far as could be seen here were doing nothing to reinforce their Italian partner—seemed to be doing nothing to discourage the belief that Italy was reeling under the Allied air offensive.

"Must Stand Up"

The organ of Reichsmarshal Goering, the Essener National Zeitung, proclaimed: "The Italians must stand up under bombings; they have to do it to win the war or they can't exist."

From Stockholm, an Associated Press correspondent remarked that acknowledgment of Italy's shaky position by both the Germans and Italians was being accompanied by an apparent attempt to divert attention in the direction of Spain, and it was recalled that accusations that the Allies were about to attack this or that country have often been used by the Axis to cover up a planned attack of their own.

Neutral observers who had been traveling of late in Germany said in Stockholm that responsible Germans had readily conceded their belief Italy was in a bad way and that some had even predicted the Italians would be unable to last another two months under a continuance of the Allied bombing.

Italian Press Turning

Stockholm also heard roundabout reports that many German officers in southern Italy and Sicily already had written Italy off, quietly acquiring mufti and even Italian identification papers so that if an invasion or an internal crackup came they could lose themselves among the Italians.

Swedish correspondents in Rome reported to Stockholm that the Italian press for the first time was printing from abroad accusations that the Nazis were the oppressors of Europe and that Italy was stringing along for mere opportunist reasons.

Here in London, where Prime Minister Churchill's round of war conferences was continuing and the time and place of the next major allied moves remained thorough secrets, the British press seemed agreed on two points:

That detailed orders have now been given to the commanders who will carry them out, and that the nature of those orders will be known only when the guns open up.

More Fascists Expelled

London, June 7 (AP).—The Rome radio said tonight that 14 more members of the Fascist Party had been expelled, among them an employe of the ministry of foreign exchange, ousted for "neglect of duty." The Associated Press recorded the broadcast.

395 Casualties Arrive From Attu

sive new facilities for their manufacture will become available. The rapidity with which these new facilities can be brought into production, he added, will partly determine the success in meeting this year's airplane goals.

Nelson conceded, however, that it will be "difficult" to meet the goals since in the first four months only 19 per cent of the year's objective for combat planes was attained. Production of service planes, including observation and photographic types, was 20 per cent of the year's goals, while trainer production ran ahead with 36 per cent.

On a dollar-weighted basis, production of airplanes, airplane armament and related items increased 8 per cent in April, the outstanding gain being in heavy bombers and Navy fighter planes. On the doller-weighted basis, a heavy bomber gives more credit than a medium bomber, a medium bomber more than a fighter, and so on. Consequently, the figure does not necessarily represent a corresponding increase in all types of planes.

Airplane Increase

In airplanes alone, there was an increase of 11 per cent. The output of single-engined Navy fighters jumped by nearly 50 per cent.

The over-all increase in munitions production was 7 per cent over March Principal categories, in addition to planes, are: Ground ordnance, up 4 per cent; Navy and Army vessels, up 3 per cent; merchant vessels, up 11 per cent; miscellaneous munitions, up 11 per cent.

Nelson described the 7 per cent increase as "somewhat more than can be expected as an average" at this stage of the program, and said that by the end of this year the monthly rate of increase probably would be tapered off considerably, with maximum output to be reached some time in 1944.

Nelson also described April production as in better balance than at any time since Pearl Harbor. The cost of munitions produced in the month reached almost five billion dollars, with aircraft and related munitions accounting for $1,649,000,000, or one-third of the total.

French Set Up Cabinet in Algiers leu, high commissioner in Syria, to succeed Catroux, now a member of the committee and Governor General of Algeria.

Membership of the war committee was not announced nor was its size disclosed.

Important Posts Unfilled

It was generally expected that Giraud would continue as commander in chief of the French army.

The only important cabinet posts still unfilled are those of minister of war, navy and air—which might be grouped in a single portfolio as has been done before in France.

As the committee is not formally set up as a government, the members will not be called ministers, but will be merely holders of portfolios. What would in normal French government be known as ministries will be given the American name of department.

So far the United States and Britain, while receiving representatives of both De Gaulle's and Giraud's factions, have not accorded them full diplomatic status, and since they regard the present committee as a de facto organization with attributes of government rather than as the government of France, it is uncertain under what terms they will receive its representatives.

Boisson to Remain

Informed sources said Pierre Boisson now is expected to remain as governor general of French West Africa, despite the opposition of De Gaulle, who led an unsuccessful attack against Dakar earlier in the war.

Giraud's press chief, Andre Labarthe, has been removed from office, it was learned.

Reliable sources said the committee in its task of establishing a united government had broken away from "party lines" of Giraudists and De Gaullists, and that each member has been voting his individual opinion.

De Gaulle's appointees, Massigli and Philip, both were reported to have voted against his propsals on several occasions, and De Gaulle found himself in a minority of one over certain points, these sources said.

Ramirez Replaces Rawson as Argentine Chief of Justice and Public Instruction.

The vacated positions were filled immediately by Ramirez after taking the oath of office, Ramirez appeared on the balcony of the Government House and made a speech which an announcer on the Argentine broadcasting network said was interrupted by shouts of "neutrality! neutrality!" from the people crowded in the plaza below.

Rawson, who ousted President Ramon S. Castillo in a coup de'etat last Friday, told the Associated Press late today that the international situation was the "fundamental cause" of the military uprising, which he declared was "indispensable to save the situation and rectify the isolationist situation in which we now so unjustly find ourselves.

As for the Cabinet shake-up, Rawson acknowledged that the Rightist sympathies of some of his ministers-designate created unfavorable reaction among liberal partisans of the revolution.

"In picking men I completely overlooked their ideologies and tendencies," he said, "thinking only of their technical capacity because I believed that the triumph of the patriotic revolution would have united all Argentines behind the same ideal—that of greatness."

Despite the relieved feeling among democratic elements toward the provisional government as the result of today's developments, Argentine liberals were said to feel that the prospects are rather better for an earlier realization of their desires in the field of foreign policy than in domestic affairs.

They are struck by the fact that the revised cabinet, while free of conspicuously nationalistic personalities, contains no one who ever distinguished himself for democratic zeal.

The prodemocratic press of Argentina was conspicuously reserved in its comment on the new regime, limiting itself to the analyzing of the problems facing the provisional government. The only paper to embrace the military administration openly has been the nationalist newspaper, Cabildo, organ of the antidemocratic faction. Cabildo noted with approval that civilians had been virtually excluded from the movement.

Members of Ramirez's cabinet are: Vice President, Admiral Saba Sueyro; Minister of the Interior, Col. Albert Gilbert; Foreign Relations, Rear Admiral Segundo Storni; Finance, Jorge Santamarina; Justice and Public Instruction, Col. Elbio Anaya; War, Gen. Edelmiro Farrell; Navy, Rear Admiral Benito Sueyro; Agriculture, Gen. Diego Mason; Public Works, Vice Admiral Ismael Galindez. Santa Marina was president of the Bank of the Nation.

Reassurance was given to the disappointed Democrats by Dr. Mario Castex, prominent Radical (Liberal) Party leader forecasting that the new government soon would issue a communique reaffirming the pro-democratic proposals of the original revolutionary proclamation.

The insurgent manifesto declaration in favor of strict observance of international engagements was generally interpreted to mean a break with the Axis.

Rawson's statement and revelations of travelers from Argentina shed some light on the strange sequence of events.

Witnesses said that when the revolutionary leaders established themselves in the Government House last Friday night they immediately found themselves the center of pressure from various sectors.

One informant said Rawson, surrounded by confusion, accepted the collaborations with scant regard to popular reaction.

The provisional president apparently was quite unprepared for the frigid reception his cabinet announcement received in all except nationalist circles.

Yank Bombers Drop Note for Nazi Announcer

A U. S. Bomber Station in Britain, June 7 (AP).—The crew of the Flying Fortress Old Puss delivered what members described as "a little souvenir for Herr Schickelgruber" (Hitler) during a recent mission to l'Orient, where they saw their bombs knock out power installations.

The souvenir was an empty 100-pound training bomb which carried a note to the women announcer of a musical radio from Berlin's station DLB.

"Dear Miss Midge," the note said. "This is just a dud, but we are sending it to you because we love you so much. Hope to see you soon and leave another calling card—but it will be much bigger. P. S. Please play on your program the song 'Der Fuehrer's Face.' From your fans—The Beaver Bomber Patrol."

"Old Puss" was hit 12 times on the raid, but returned safely with only one crewman wounded.

Treasury Fixes 25% of Payroll As Bond Goal

New York, June 7 (AP).—Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., today announced that reorganization of war bond sales groups in New York State would be followed by similar regroupings throughout the country and predicted the new setup would make forced savings unnecessary.

In a general press interview following his address at a closed session of the Investment Bankers Association, Morgenthau said of the intensified bond selling effort to come:

"I think it will be so successful that forced savings won't be necessary. If not, then we will have to get it some other way."

Enlarging on a statement made in his speech in Newark, N. J., last Wednesday, Morgenthau said the Treasury Department was aiming to get "25 per cent of the payroll income into bonds."

U. S. Planes Help Chinese Batter Japs

By the Associated Press

Chungking, June 7.—United States planes lashed out at the Japanese all along the upper Yangtze battlefront Sunday in support of heartened Chinese troops who continued to hurl the enemy back in one of his biggest defeats in China.

The Chinese high command said more than 1000 Japanese, fleeing in all directions from Itu, Yangtze port 18 miles below Ichang, were killed or wounded Sunday in a mopping operation at that place, and that a number of strategic points were seized in the area south of the Yangtze between Ichang and Shasi, 70 miles to the southeast.

The Chinese continued to thrust toward the river all along the line in southern Hupeh and northern Hunan Provinces and reported more than 200 of the enemy killed in widespread operations in which Japanese communications were cut and garrisons raided.

One advance was reported to be carrying forward toward Hwajung, Japanese stronghold north of Tungting Lake.

The fall of Hwajung would greatly relieve the already diminished threat to China's rice bowl.

Fighters of the Fourteenth United States Air Force of Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault swept the 70-mile stretch of the Yangtze between Ichang and Shasi on Sunday making it hot for Japanese troops retreating in small craft.

Mitchell bombers and Warhawk fighters scored hits on runways and revetments in an attack on Pailoki, a Japanese air force headquarters 140 miles down river from Ichang, and the Warhawks hit a second airdrome at Shasi, destroying a plane, a truck and an operations shack. Pailoki, opposite Yochow, was attacked once before on June 2.

The United States communique said no American planes were lost and no opposition encountered.

Cut in Shipments Of Newsprint Seen

New York, June 7 (AP).—Coincident with a meeting of the Canadian newsprint administrator with officials of the War Production Board here today, paper industry sources said Canadian newsprint manufacturers had been ordered by Dominion authorities to reduce their shipments 12 per cent.

There was no announcement from the conference, although participants indicated that one might be made from Washington later in the week.

Russians Hurl Back Nazi Thrusts Into Lines As Red Airmen Pound Communication Points

London (Tuesday), June 8 (AP).—Strong German feeler thrusts into Soviet lines were smashed back Monday on three main sectors, the Russians reported early today, but the main action on the long front still appeared to be in the air, with Red army and German airmen trading particularly heavy blows Sunday night.

Soviet bombers attacked the Nazi-held railway junction of Unecha in the Orel district, pounding ammunition, fuel and arms dumps and concentrations of enemy trains moving troops up to the front, a Moscow broadcast recorded by the Associated Press said. It reported only one Russian plane lost.

The radio declared 12 German planes were shot down out of a force of about 100 that struck at Gorki, industrial center on the Volga, 250 miles east of Moscow.

The Germans declared the raid was the third successive night attack on Gorki, and that their planes set huge fires with 500 tons of explosives and 100,000 incendiaries. They said 1000 planes were used in the assaults.

Repulse of German scouting raids in force on the Western Front, in the Balakleya region on the Donets Front, and before Rostov-on-Don was reported in the Russian midnight communique recorded by the Soviet monitor.

Three hundred Germans were killed in fighting west of Moscow, the bulletin said, and an enemy scouting raid was beaten off.

Russian planes sank an enemy transport in the Gulf of Riga, and in the Black Sea sent down three cutters and five motor boats carrying soldiers and ammunition, the communique said.

'Princess,' Veteran Of K-9 Forces, Is Home Again

"Princess," the private of the United States Army's K-9 Corps, who was invalided home to her master, William McLean, 3313 Fortieth Street, Colmar Manor, Md., recently, and who was missing yesterday, has returned. And quite contrite she is, too.

Princesss, a brown and black Airdale, was none the worse for her lengthy excursion, McLean said. She had been bathed a short time before she left and was still clean when she returned.

Princess heralded her return in her best military manner, waiting until she heard movement in the house, then barking. She limped, with her wounded right leg held high, into the kitchen.

London, June 7 (AP).—An American soldier—presumably the son of the man who bought the Brooklyn Bridge—purchased a London barrage balloon for $180, Scotland Yard reported tonight.

The soldier is now trying to identify the salesman from Scotland Yard photograph files.

U. S. Job Bill Wins Victory in Senate

McKellar Expects Early Final Action On His Measure

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

The McKellar bill to make Senate confirmation the rule for Federal employes receiving $4500 or more a year scored a strategic, but not final, victory in the Senate yesterday.

Final disposition hinges on several restricting amendments, but the Senate's vote, 43 to 22, led the measure's author, Senator McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee to predict that the measure would probably be approved in its present form.

This was the view, too, of Administration leaders, although a close fight is expected over a substitute confirmation bill proposed by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming. His plan would eliminate the McKellar "salary yardstick" and apply the confirmation rule only to policy making officials, as contrasted with nonpolicy making employes.

Clear-Cut Standard

McKellar and his supporters contend that the $4500 provision would fix a clear-cut standard for confirmation and would keep Government bureaus from "fineagling" over the definition of what officials were policy making.

Final Senate action on the measure was postponed to make way for the Agriculture appropriation bill, after Republican Senate Leader McNary of Oregon observed that "we've gotten along a good many years" without the McKellar bill, and suggested that it might be left a few days longer to permit action on the farm bill.

Acting Democratic Leader Hill of Alabama announced that he will support an amendment by Senator Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico to exempt employes of the Tennessee Valley Authority from application of the McKellar bill.

Another Amendment

Hill said another amendment to exempt employes of the Bonneville Power Administration would also be proposed.

The main test, however, will come on the O'Mahoney substitute, and leaders expected a close decision. From the Senate the bill would go to the House.

McKellar said he believed the size of the Senate's vote on his $4500 confirmation plan was a good sign that it would be the Senate's final choice, but added, "You never can tell."

O'Mahoney said it showed that there was substantial opposition to the salary yardstick, and gave his own substitute "an excellent chance of being adopted."

It was estimated during debate that McKellar's bill would require confirmation of 30,000 to 35,000 Federal employes, and that O'Mahoney's would limit the number to 10,000 to 15,000.

Since the Agriculture appropriation has Senate right of way, leaders were uncertain when the McKellar bill would be sent to the House. McKellar said it was possible to finish both bills today, but other members said it was likely the farm debate might last through tomorrow, leaving the McKellar bill for Thursday.

Gen. Kirk Speaks

Death Rate In Tunisia Called Low

By Howard W. Blakeslee
Associated Press Science Editor

Chicago, June 7.—Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, surgeon general of the Army, told the American Medical Association house of delegates today that the American wounded death rate in Tunisia was "unbelievably low."

The rate was 2½ to 3½ per cent for the Americans' first campaign before they moved north to attack Bizerte. These are the first official figures. They are higher than in some other fighting, but were described as "miraculous" because of the long distances the wounded had to be carried. In World War I under like conditions deaths would have been 15 to 18 per cent, it was said.

One life-saving aid, for abdominal wounds, is a stomach tube, to withdraw gas from the digestive tract. It is not new, but is one of a battery of improvements.

In Tunisia, said General Kirk, the wounded had to be carried on the average 8 to 20 miles through mountains to the first medical stations, and after that another 650 miles by ambulance to evacuation hospitals.

Planes, which carried war supplies to the front, brought back 13,000 men to hospitals, including both battle casualties and the sick.

The foremost life saver was blood plasma, which saved shock and bleeding, and without which, General Kirk said, many men would have died before they could reach medical care.

Second in life saving was surgery, which cleaned up the wounds to reduce risk of infection. In third place were the sufa drugs, aiding to minimize infection.

In this southern campaign an unbelievable record was a total of only 77 cases of bone infection. That trouble afflicted 75 per cent of the wounded in previous wars. The 77 cases were an almost astronomically small fraction of 1 per cent of wounded.

Gas gangrene, another killer, caused just one death, and there were only 12 cases altogether. Proper surgery was the main reason, General Kirk said.

Dodge Inheritance Leads to Divorce In 2d Marriage

Detroit, June 7 (AP).—Mrs. Annie Laurine Dodge Lange, daughter of a Manitoulin Island tugboat captain whose first husband, Daniel G. Dodge, left her a share of the Dodge Brothers' motorcar fortune, obtained a divorce in Circuit Court here today from Dr. William E. Lange.

She told Judge Ira W. Jayne that the money she inherited from Dodge, who was killed in a motorboat accident 13 days after their marriage, brought unhappiness in her second marital venture. She received a $2,500,000 cash settlement from the Dodge estate in July, 1940, about two years after young Dodge's death.

She testified in court that Dr. Lange, whom she married at Champaign, Ill., on January 30, 1941, "was obsessed with the idea of convincing everyone we were living on his income.'

"He insisted that I do all my own housework," she said, "and complained that my money placed him in a false light with his friends."

and many Government economists—declare no fair comparison between Great Britain and this country can be drawn.

By utilizing subsidies, the British have been able to hold their cost of living index at 29.7 per cent above April, 1941, levels. The index in this country on April 15 of this year was up 23 per cent above the level of January, 1941, and only 24.1 per cent above the 1935-39 average.

British food costs were rolled back 3 per cent by subsidies to make them 20 per cent above prewar levels, according to figures from the British Food Supply Council. Food costs in this country are up 40 per cent above the 1935-39 average, but most of this has been due to rises in the prices of items left virtually "uncontrolled" by OPA. These particularly include fresh fruits and vegetables.

The comparison between British and American food costs is not a "true" one because the cost of living index for each country is set up differently. The British contains about 20 food items and the American 60.

Many items not in the index in Britain have been left uncontrolled, although the British Food Ministry buys and resells all the country's food and so has a much tighter control than has been attempted in America.

Other Differences

Forty per cent of the American consumer's "expenditure" dollar—which covers all items in the cost of living index—goes for food. In Britain, 60 per cent of the cost of living dollar goes for food.

In addition to the $450,000,000 food subsidy program announced by OPA, this country has scores of other subsidies such as those included in the British program. On the 1943 pack of four vegetables—tomatoes, beans, peas, and sweet corn—for instance, the Commodity Credit Corporation will spend 25 million dollars that will not be passed on to the consumer. It will purchase these vegetables at increased farm prices and sell them to canners at the levels of last year, so OPA price ceilings to consumers will not be raised.

The total amounts of all the food subsidies have not been announced, but one Department of Agriculture official yesterday estimated they may run close to a billion dollars this year.

Ford Office Girls Discard Slacks, Defy Dress Ban

Detroit, June 7 (AP).—The office girls out at the Ford Motor Co.'s Highland Park plant didn't like what slacks did to their silhouettes, so they wore dresses to work today.

The company didn't go for the dress, so the girls sat idly in front of their typewriters.

Dresses, said a company spokesman, are dangerous—they might become entangled in machinery when the girls go out into the part of the factory where machines are located. So the company gave the girls no work to do, and the young ladies wouldn't go home.

Ben Garrison, president of the local U. A. W.-C. I. O. union, pleaded the girls' case. The company said they weren't fired, but only told to go home and put on some "decent clothes.

According to the Ford spokesman, a general rule exists that says all women workers must wear slacks. The union denied knowledge of any such agreement.

Meat Inspector For Maryland And D. C. Named

A meat marketing supervisor to inspect slaughtering in Maryland and the District of Columbia was named yesterday by the Department of Agriculture War Board.

Niles S. Baldridge of Baltimore was given the post. He also is Maryland State supervisor for the Food Distribution Administration.

He will be charged with regulation of slaughtering to insure routing of meat through reputable commercial channels, enforcement of the law requiring Federal slaughtering permits, maintenance of sanitary conditions at slaughter houses; prevention of meat waste and insurance of equitable distribution.

Gen. Reybold Puts Flood Loss At 60 Million

Floods in the Midwest during April and May did approximately 60 million dollars damage and inundated 3 million acres, Maj. Gen. Eugene Reybold, chief of Army Engineers who toured the entire area by plane, told 200 members of the Society of American Military Engineers yesterday at the Hamilton Hotel.

"The Coast Guard, the Red Cross and our own Army troops did a mganificent job of working on the levees and aiding the people of the stricken communities covered by the waters of the Mississippi, Missouri, Illinois and Wabash Rivers," General Reybold declared.

The sturdy levees from Cairo, Ill., to the Gulf of Mexico are "very substantial" and would hold even if all the rivers emptying into the Mississippi peaked simultaneously, he asserted, but there are only a few levees, for the most part poorly located and with inadequate foundations, along the length of the entire Missouri River.

"Because they are privately built, we have authority only to repair them but not to increase their height," General Reybold said. "They still are entirely inadequate."

He added that he saw many amphibious jeeps, operated by soldiers, rescuing farm residents and, if the people had escaped, carrying pigs and sheep to safety. The loss of life was small, he said, but the destruction to crops, highways, railroads and bridges was tremendous.

"At St. Louis, the flood waters were rushing by at 825,000 second feet (cubic feet per second), and at Fort Smith at 850,000 second feet," he pointed out. "There is nothing more threatening or more frightening than water in volume, but fortunately the floods of 1927 and 1936 brought our Nation to its senses and resulted in excellent and sensible flood control laws."

Churchill's Yank Pilots Make British Order

London (Tuesday), June 8 (AP).—American pilots of the Liberator plane "Commando" which Prime Minister Churchill uses for globe trotting were appointed to the order of the British Empire today by King George VI.

Capt. William John A. Vanderkloot, 29, the pilot, was appointed an honorary commander of the order. Capt. John Howard Ruggles, 26, the co-pilot, was named an honorary member. Vanderkloot is from Sarasota, Fla.; Ruggles is from San Francisco.

Driving Ban May Be Extended to Midwest

Middle West.

J. R. Parten, director of transportation for PAW, appearing yesterday for the second time before the group of Senators and Representatives from 12 States, said he personally favored extension of the pleasure driving ban to all parts of the United States.

Parten told the committee that if the value of A coupons in the Middle West were cut from four gallons to three, 40,000 barrels of gasoline a day would be saved.

This would not mean, however, that 40,000 barrels more would be shipped to the East. Tank cars now hauling from further away would be put on the shorter haul from the Midwest so that the East would receive approximately 15,000 aditional barrels.

D'Alesandro Appointed

Other developments of the day on Capitol Hill were:

1. Appointment of Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat) of Maryland to represent the District of Columbia at all sessions of the Eastern bloc. D'Alesandro already represents Maryland on the committee.

2. Introduction of a bill by Representative Disney (Democrat) of Oklahoma to transfer from OPA to PAW all powers of the Price Administrator with respect to crude oil.

3. Introduction by Hartley of a bill to liquidate the OPA altogether, transferring its functions in regard to gasoline and oil to PAW, rents to National Housing Agency, and other functions to an Office of Civilian Supply which would be created under the bill.

Discussing OPA, Hartley said in a statement, "n place of performance, we get the administrative muscle dance."

Congress created a Frankenstein when it created OPA, Hartley said.

Charges Boondoggling

"This fumbling, glowering monster is stumbling through our economy, charged with protecting it against inflation, but in actuality creating conditions that will destroy it. In place of competent administration we have bungling. In place of decisive action we have boondoggling," Hartley charged.

Dr. Charles F. Phillips, director of automotive supply rationing for OPA, informed the committee that OPA could not extend the pleasure driving ban in other parts of the country without a directive from PAW. He said rationing had been "tighter' in the East because of lower quota allocations, and added that there had been no success in keeping consumption within those allocations.

He said pleasure driving in North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia and Florida was depreciating the gasoline reserves in those areas by 6000 barrels a day.

Has No Answer

Hartley showed Philips a copy of a Newark, N. J., newspaper carrying a streamer disclosing the fact that 635,000 gas rationing coupons had been seized in a raid on a dry-cleaning establishment, and asked for an explanation. Phillips said he didn't have the answer.

The committee yesterday formally elected Hartley chairman. Other members are: Senator Brewster of Maine and Representatives Stearns of New Hampshire, Plumley of Vermont, Reed of New York, Bates of Massachusetts, Rodgers of Pennsylvania, Rorand of Rhode Island, Miller of Connecticut and Willey of Delaware, Republicans, and Bureh of Virginia and D'Alesandro of Maryland, Democrats.

Reports Gas in Storage

A reserve of 44 million gallons of low octane gasoline, suitable for use in tractors and other farm machinery, is on storage in West Virginia, Representative Bates (Republican) of Massachusetts said yesterday.

He suggested that the fuel be brought into the Washington area and distributed to farmers, thus relieving the strain on Washington's supply. He said he had been informed that OPA had refused to permit the sale of the fuel here.

Last week D. C. Aist of College Park, special assistant to the Maryland Agricultural War Board, told a Senate subcommittee that hundred's of farm machines are stalled for lack of gasoline in the East.

Pelton, Court Attache, Poet, Dies in N. Y.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Monticello, N. Y., June 7.—Frank Curtis Pelton, author of several volumes of free verse, died here today. He was 69 years old and had served as secretary to Justice Ferdinand Pecora of the Supreme Court when the latter was special assistant district attorney in New York and to Ballington Booth. For six years he was chief court reporter in the United States District Court in New York, serving later as court reporter in Brooklyn and in Washington, D. C.

hostages. German police trucks, armed with machine guns, cruised the deserted streets. Curfew from 8 p. m. until 6 a. m. was strictly enforced, and groups of more than five were forbidden to gather. People looking out of windows during curfew hours were shot at, and those who misunderstood the curfew orders also were fired upon by the German police, the report said.

The executions following the sentencing took place in some cases outside the Dutch cities, but in others were held in public squares with the public to look on. At one place, a German officer, after directing the execution of six persons, said he would smoke a cigarette before continuing. The remaining condemned persons were forced to wait quietly until the officer had finished.

At Frisia and Groningen, it was reported, farmers and workers attacked the Nazis with pitchforks and axes, assisted by some Dutch police. They were no match for German machine guns, however, and nearly all were killed.

Dutch Nazi Slain

London, June 7 (AP).—Aneta, Netherlands news agency, reported today that Dr. Folkert E. Posthuma, 69 described as one of the most prominent Dutch Nazis, was shot and killed by patriots on Thursday.

Posthuma was a member of the puppet "secretariat of state" set up by Anton Mussert, leading Dutch Nazi. He specialized in agricultural and fisheries affairs.

Aneta, the Netherlands news agency, also said reports were current throughout Holland that Prof. Rudolf van Genechten, delegate for arts, education and sciences and commissioner for South Holland, tried to commit suicide but failed. On May 6 he was given an indefinite leave of absence by Anton A. Mussert, leading Dutch Nazi, because of "ill health."

ing they would "legalize" strikes, and thus stimulate a flurry of "legal" walkouts disastrous to war production.

More likely to win conference acceptance were House provisions barring political contributions by labor unions in any election to Federal office. The Corrupt Practices Act now bans such contributions by banks or corporations.

Considerable Senate conference support also had developed for the House bill requirements that all labor unions involved in war work register with the NLRB, filing data annually on membership, initiation fees, dues, salaries, bonuses and travel allowances of officials, and methods of financial accounting.

Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas, author of the Senate version of the bill, said he hoped for a final conference agreement today. Connally said that in any event the bill should be law before the June 20 zero hour for resumption of the mine strike.

Qualified voters of the corporation as hereinafter defined to a number of not less than one-tenth of one per centum (1/10%) of the number of policies of the corporation in force as set forth in the next preceding annual statement of the corporation filed with the Commissioner of Banking and Insurance may nominate a candidate for each office of director to be filled at such next ensuing election by filing with the Commissioner of Banking and Insurance at least five months before the day fixed for such election a certificate, which may be in any number of counterpart originals, signed and acknowledged by each of them, giving his address and the number of his policy and giving the name, occupation and address of each candidate so nominated, together with a statement signed by each such candidate to the effect that he will accept if elected, and by serving upon the secretary of the corporation at least five months before the day fixed for such election a duplicate original of such certificate and of such statement.

(c) The qualified voters of the corporation shall consist of every policyholder who is twenty-one years of age or more and whose policy has been in force for at least one year. For the purposes of this section the term "policyholder" shall mean (1) the person insured under an individual policy of life insurance issued upon the application of such person, (2) the person who effectuates any such policy upon the life of another, (3) the person to whom any annuity or pure endowment is presently or prospectively payable by the terms of an individual annuity or pure endowment contract except where the policy or contract declares some other person to be the owner thereof, in which case such owner shall be deemed to be the policyholder, (4) the employer under a policy of group life or other form of group insurance issued to such employer covering his employees and (5) the employer under a group annuity contract issued to such employer and covering his employees. No other person shall be deemed to be a "policyholder" for the purposes of this section.

Such notice shall contain the names of the persons nominated by the Board of Directors and by others at the time of commencement of publication and the death, withdrawal or incapacity of any such nominee or the nomination of any person in his stead before or after the completion of publication shall not invalidate such notice, nor shall the omission of any publication herein prescribed invalidate such notice or the election to which it relates; provided, the corporation shall have made diligent effort to cause such publication to be made.

(f) All ballots voted shall be received by the tellers subject to verification and ascertainment of the validity thereof and of the qualification of the voters, and, in the case of ballots voted by proxy, the respective proxy instruments shall be filed with the tellers. 10. The Board of Directors shall have full power from time to time to make, alter, amend and rescind by-laws, rules and regulations for the conduct of the business and affairs of the corporation in conformity with the provisions of this amended charter, and to employ such officers and agents as the Board of Directors in its discretion may determine for the conduct of such business and affairs.

Treatment for Aged Inmate Delayed by Doctor's Absence

The absence from town of Dr. George C. Ellis, physician for the poor in the Fourth Police Precinct, was given by the Commissioners as the cause of belated medical attention given Mrs. Mollie Hamburg, 75-year-old District old-age pensioner, on Sunday.

At the same time the Commissioners said that a daughter in Baltimore had been notified of Mrs. Hamburg's illness by the police when the doctor was unobtainable. They further stated efforts had been made to have the elderly woman enter the Home for Aged and Infirm at Blue Plains, but she refused to accept the domicile, and the daughter in Baltimore had "done nothing in the premises."

Mrs. Hamburg of the 800 block of F Street Southwest became ill on Sunday, and it was some hours before she was removed to Gallinger Hospital because of the requirement for medical certification and the fact Ellis, who could have given it, had left town for the weekend. However, the Commissioners said, the patient, without the intervention of her daughter, was finally admitted to the hospital where she was reported yesterday to be in a normal condition.

Ellis, who had not advised the Health Deaprtment of his departure from the city, had previously submitted his resignation as physician to the poor, effective June 30.

Soldiers Killed From Nearby Areas

The War Department yesterday listed names of 286 soldiers killed in action in North Africa.

Maryland casualties were Pvt. John W. Delahay, Baltimore, and Sergt. Eugene W. Tolley, Fishing Creek. Virginia men killed in action were Pvt. Walter P. Beabers, jr., Bishop; Staff Sergt. Robert A. Durham, Martinsville, and Pvt. Stuart F. Snow, Stanardsville.

Dr. Carl Voegtlin, Cancer Institute Head, to Retire

Dr. Carl Voegtlin, director of the National Cancer Institute, will retire from the United States Public Health Service July 31, it was announced yesterday.

Dr. Voegtlin has been with the service since 1913. He was commissioned medical director in 1931 and has been in charge of all cancer research since 1937, and was the first chief of the National Cancer Institute, established by act of Congress in that year.

His portrait, painted by Thomas Moore, was presented to Surgeon General Thomas Parran, the council's chairman ex-officio.

Supreme Court Denies Review In Loan Case

The Supreme Court yesterday ruled in effect that the District of Columbia Small Loan Act, which prohibits the loaning of money for more than 6 per cent without a license, applies to loans of more than $200 as well as lesser sums, by refusing to review a previous decision to that effect.

The earlier decision by the United States Court of Appeals for the District was challenged by Nathan M. Lubar, trustee for the District Finance Corp. The legislation, usually called the "loan shark law," excludes banks, trust companies, building and loan associations and real estate brokers.

Lubar, who had sued two persons for alleged default on a $900 loan, complained that the Court of Appeals had held that the entire principal was uncollectable and the note and security null and void because excessive interest had been charged. Lubar's petition contended that Congress intended the 1913 legislation to apply only to loans of $200 or less.

News Advertising Aided Bond Sales

New York, June 7.—Newspapers throughout the Nation gave the United States Treasury several million dollars' worth of advertising space to help oversubscribe the second war loan, Frank E. Tripp, general manager of the Gannett newspapers, told delegates to the annual convention of the Newspaper Advertising Executives Association today.

Trip said $4,564,000 of advertising space was sold to special sponsors or donated outright by 1758 daily and Sunday newspaper and 7735 weekly papers throughout the country.

Four million tons of the sun's mass is converted into radiant energy every second.

Star 100 Times Larger Than Sun Seen

Chicago, June 7 (AP).—Discovery of a new double star weighing approximately 100 times as much as the sun, or 200 billion billion billion tons, was reported today in the Astrophysical Journal by Dr. Daniel M. Popper, instructor in astronomy at the University of Chicago.

Dr. Popper's photographic observations indicate, he said, that the star—designated as Ry in the constellation Scutum—actually is composed of two stars which revolve about each other in a period of 11 days.

The two stars are surrounded by an immense ring of gas composed of atoms thrown off by the system, the scientist reported. Spectrum lines of the atmosphere of one star show that the elements comprising it include aelium and silicon. The other star is invisible, however, Dr. Hopper explained, adding that its presence and other characteristics were inferred from the observed circular motion of the brighter star. With each revolution in its orbit, the invisible star eclipses the other, Dr. Popper said.

● Folks, meet Bud. He's American. He's tough. That shiner on his left eye—the one calling for about forty points worth of porterhouse—to him is just an invitation to get tougher.

But there's nothing mean about Bud. A favorite with everybody in his block, he fights only when somebody starts pushing him around. He's tough in spirit and fiber. That's typically American. A shiner was hung on our national left eye late in 1941—and just look what our boys are doing about it now because they're tough. Fitted by planning and training they're mastering the toughest job in the world!

Planning and training fitted American railroads for war. They have that spirit and fiber, too. That's why they are able to handle the toughest transportation job in history. They need a lot more equipment, but the fighting fronts have first call, so the railroads—being American—buckle down and make the best possible use of what they have.

Planning, however, must go on. And a financial backlog must be accumulated for carrying out those plans when Victory has been won. That's when ROCK ISLAND'S Program of Planned Progress will resume its forward march; will meet the increased transportation demands of peacetime tomorrow—and provide jobs for thousands of American boys as they step out of uniform.

As yesterday—and today—so tomorrow ROCK ISLAND'S sole purpose is to provide the finest in transportation.

Text of President's Speech To Food Conference Delegates

The text of President Roosevelt's remarks to delegates to the United Nations Food Conference:

It gives me great pleasure to welcome to the White House you who have served so splendidly at the epoch-making United Nations Conference on Food and Agriculture.

I use that word "epoch-making" advisedly. The conference could not have failed to be significant because it was the first United Nations conference. But it has succeeded even beyond our hopes; it is truly epoch-making because, in reaching unanimity upon complex and difficult problems, you have demonstrated beyond question that the United Nations really are united—not only for the prosecution of the war but for the solution of the many and difficult problems of peace. This conference has been a living demonstration of the methods by which the conversations of nations of like mind contemplated by Article VII of the Mutual Aid Agreement can and will give practical application to the principles of the Atlantic Charter.

You have been dealing with agriculture, the most basic of all human activities, and with food, the most basic of all human needs. Twice as many people are employed in work on food and agriculture as in work in all other fields combined. And all people have, in the literal sense of the word, a vital interest in food.

That a child or adult should get the nourishment necessary for full health is too important a thing to be left to mere chance.

Responsibility Recognized

You have recognized that society must accept this responsibility. As you stated in your declaration, "the primary responsibility lies with each nation for seeing that its own people have the food needed for health and life; steps to this end are for national determination. But each nation can fully achieve its goal only if all work together." On behalf of the United States I accept this declaration.

You have gone beyond the general recognition of principles to deal in specific terms with specific tasks and projects.

You have examined the needs of all countries for food and other agricultural products, both as they will exist in the short-run period of recovery from the devastation of war, and as they will exist over the longer run, when our efforts can be fully devoted to expanding the production of food so that it will be adequate for health the world over.

You have surveyed with courage and with realism the magnitude of these problems and have reached unanimous agreement that they can, and must—and will—be solved.

Nations Joined in Great Aim

It is true that no nation has ever had enough food to feed all of its people as we now know human beings should be fed. But neither have nations representing over 80 per cent of the world's two billion inhabitants ever before been joined together to achieve such an aim. Never before have they set out to bend their united efforts to the development of the world's resources so that all men might seek to attain food they need.

For the short run, you have pointed out steps which have to be taken both in increasing supplies and in maintaining economy of use and coordination of distribution.

In considering our long range problems, you have surveyed our knowledge of the inadequacy in the quantity and quality of the diet of peoples in all lands. You have pooled our knowledge of the means of expanding our output, of increasing our agricultural efficiency, and of adjusting agricultural production to consumption needs. In the fields of both production and consumtion you have recognized the need for the better utilization of the knowledge we now have and for extending still further the boundaries of our knowledge through education and research.

You have called upon your governments individually and collectively to enlarge and improve their activities in these fields.

Permanent Organization

For the perfection and rapid execution of these plans, you have recommended the creation of a permanent United Nations organization. To facilitate and hasten the creation of that organization, and to, carry on the work you have begun until its creation, you have established an interim commission. The Government of the United States is honored that you have asked that the interim commission have its seat in Washington, and will be glad to make the preliminary action for the establishment of that commission which you have intrusted to it.

Finally, you have expressed your deep conviction that our goal in this field cannot be attained without forward action in other fields as well. Increased food production must the accompanied by increased industrial production and by increased purchasing power. There must be measures for dealing with trade barriers, international exchange stability and international investment.

The better use of natural and human resources must be assured to improve living standards. Many of these question lie outside the scope of the work you have undertaken, but their solution is none the less essential to its success. They require, and will receive, our united attention.

In the political field, these relationships are equally important. And they work both ways. A sound world agricultural program will depend upon world political security, while that security will in turn be greatly strengthened if each country can be assured of the food it needs. Freedom from want and freedom from fear go hand in hand.

Ultimate Objective

Our ultimate objective can be simply stated: It is to build for ourselves, for all men, a world in which each individual human being shall have the opportunity to live out his life in peace; to work productively, earning at least enough for his actual needs and those of his family; to associate with the friends of his choice; to think and worship freely; and to die secure in the knowledge that his children, and their children, shall have the same opportunities.

That objective, as men know from long and bitter experience, will not be easy to achieve. But you and I know also that, throughout history, there has been no more worthwhile, no more inspiring challenge.

That challenge will be met.

You have demonstrated beyond question that free peoples all over the world can agree upon a common course of action and upon common machinery for action. You have brought new hope to the world that, through the establishment of orderly international procedures for the solution of international problems, there will be attained freedom from want and freedom from fear. The United Nations are united in the war against fear and want as solidly and effectively as they are united on the battlefront in this world-wide war against aggresison.

And we are winning by action and unity.

Illinois Mines Bow to Lewis

withdraw from the Illinois Coal Operators Association before agreeing to the increase.

Moses pointed out that his company employs 27,000 out of 53,000 "captive" miners, more than involved in the Illinois agreement.

Bargaining on the "portal to portal" pay question was ordered by WLB on May 25 with the stipulation that the parties should return tomorrow and make a "progress report."

Burke was said to have moved yesterday that the conference adjourn and report to the War Labor Board, but the motion failed because of objections by the miners. Instead, it was decided to recess until 10 a. m. today for further negotiations.

Associates said that Lewis was elated by the Illinois development. They expressed the belief that Indiana mine operators shortly would make a similar offer.

In some New Deal quarters, the announcement by Green was viewed as having important "political" implications with Lewis, a prominent Republican labor leader, receiving his best offer so far with the assistance of a Republican Governor.

Lewis had previously offered to accept a settlement at $1.50. The Northern operators had agreed to come up to a $1, with Southern operators sticking at 80 cents a day.

Green stated that the arrangement would permit the continued operation of the Illinois coal mines, regardless of whether miners and operators reached a settlement before the June 20 "truce" deadline set by Lewis when he ordered the second general coal strike ended. The adjustment was offered retroactive to April 1, and Ray Edmundson, Illinois U. M. W. president, said he had agreed to accept it "as a basis for negotiations."

A spokesman for the Illinois operators said the conferees agreed that any arrangement would be subject to approval of the War Labor Board.

Ickes, Federal operator of the coal mines, sent this telegram to Lewis:

"It is reported to me that Lane Colliery, Glen Alden Coal Co., Plymouth, Pa.; Midland Mine, Pittsburgh Coal Co., and Watson Mine, Westmoreland Co., Conemaugh, Pa., closed today because the miners have refused to report for duty.

"I expect that you will use your best efforts to see that these men and any others who may still be out on strike return to their posts immediately.

"It is estimated that the interruption of production last week resulted in the loss of about 11 million tons of coal which cannot be recaptured. This loss of tonnage substantially interfers with the conduct of the war and with the Nation's ability to provide coal for house heating next winter. Every ton of coal that can be mined now is vital. I expect your assistance and that of every person in the coal industry to the end that there is no interruption of work, however restricted it may be, so that the Nation can be assured the supply of coal which it needs. It is my job to see that this coal is provided. I must insist that coal be supplied.

"I expect you to do your part in this job and I shall expect and insist that the operators and the operating managers of the mines do their part."

of peace. . . ."

They applauded again when he said the United States Government was honored by their recommendation that Washington be the seat of the Interim Commission, which is to carry on the work of the Hot Springs conference until a permanent United Nations organization is created.

President Roosevelt spoke with obvious feeling when he talked about "our ultimate objective."

"It is," he said, "to build for ourselves, for all men, a world in which each individual human being shall have the opportunity to live out his life in peace; to work productively, earning at least enough for his actual needs and those of his family; to associate with the friends of his choice; to think and worship freely, and to die secure in the knowledge that his children, and their children, shall have the same opportunities."

He said he knew that this objective would not be easy to achieve. Nevertheless, he said, in all history there had never been a more worthwhile and inspiring challenge.

"That challenge will be met," he said.

After the President finished his speech, he invited the delegates and their advisers to join him in the South Grounds. The Marine Band was there, the red coats of its members vivid against the deep green of the trees. Off to one side was a refreshment stand with a striped canopy.

President Roosevelt took a position under a maple tree where for the last year or so he has been greeting kings and other chiefs of state from all parts of the world. Mrs. Roosevelt stood alongside him.

Then, in the biggest reception the White House has seen since Pearl Harbor, the delegates and their advisers filed across the lawn to greet the President and the First Lady. Many of them executed jackknife bows as they approached, and a few of them kissed Mrs. Roosevelt's hand in Old World fashion.

Never before had such a cosmopolitan throng gathered on the White House lawn. H. S. Malik, the Sikh delegate from India, stood out, a distinguished figure with a black turban and a gray beard. The chief Russian delegate, Alexey D. Krutikov with his great neck and husky shoulders, looked something like Wendell Willkie. With him was Col. Vladimer G. Gorsky, close-shaven and wearing his Red army uniform. In line, too, was a one-armed delegate, E. J. Fawcett of New Zealand, who left his other arm overseas in the last war.

The Ethiopian delegates, Yilma Deressa, Araya Ababa and Berkanu Tesamma, who came to the United States with a suit case loaded with gold, also brought along something else—a portrait of Hailie Selassi, first of the rulers to regain his throne from the Axis.

McNutt Assails Steel Industry On Work Week

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Staff Writer

War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt challenged critics within the steel industry yesterday to prove allegations that his recent regulation requiring labor consultation in applying the 48-hour work week to steel plants will slow down production.

Another manpower development was an announcement by the War, Navy and Justice Departments and the Maritime Commission of new hiring procedures for loyal aliens. Under new arrangements, loyal aliens will be "cleared" for war work within two weeks instead of the hitherto much longer period required.

McNutt issued his challenge at a press conference in commenting on protests by steel industry representatives against his order requiring that unions be consulted along with management to help form local or regional War Manpower Commission decisions on hirings and discharges.

While stressing that neither labor nor management would do more than "advise" manpower officials, McNutt pointed out that hiring would still be done by the employers. As to criticisms that labor consultation would slow down production, he added:

"I defy any of them to point out how production has been slowed down by any of the War Manpower activities."

In responding to questions about reports that some local draft boards had been violating the ban against induction of fathers by going "a little out of the way beyond the nondeferrable list," McNutt urged men drafted in this way to appeal.

He added, however, that the practice was not widespread and some of those boards who were reported taking fathers outside of the nondeferrable list had been told to stop the practice.

Dr. Glazebrook Is Buried At Oak Hill

Funeral services were held yesterday in the Church of the Epiphany for Dr. Larkin White Glazebrook, 74, retired Washington surgeon who became a field worker for the national committee on evangelism of the Protestant Episcopal Church. Burial was in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Dr. Glazebrook died Thursday at his home, 2022 P Street Northwest, after a long illness. Since his retirement from practice in 1927, he had been active in church and social work and made many lecture trips.

A native of Richmond, Va., he had lived in Washington for the past 50 years. After attending the University of Virginia, Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons and Long Island College, he was resident physician at St. Luke's Hospital, Pa., and attending physician at Emergency Hospital here.

Dr. Glazebrook was a member of the District Medical Society, American Medical Association, Sons of the Revolution, Metropilitan and Chevy Chase Clubs. He was a past grand officer of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity, which his father helped found, and which was represented at services yesterday by George H. Lamar, who succeeded Dr. Glazebrook as worthy grand chief. Other members of the group and the Alumni Association of Washington also attended.

In addition to his wife, Mrs. Jane T. Glazebrook, he is survived by two sons, Lieut. Col. White Glazebrook, jr., and Robinson Cox Glazebrook of Beloit, Wis.; a daughter, Mrs. Virginia T. Carnduff of Washington, and four grandchildren.

27 Billion Navy Measure Promptly Voted by Senate

The Senate gave speedy approval yesterday to a $27,637,000,000 Naval Appropriations bill carrying $9,118,000,000 for construction of surface vessels and $4,583,000,000 for 29,142 airplanes.

The measure, which goes back to the House for consideration of relatively minor additions by the Senate, was passed with a minimum of debate.

In line with announced plans of the Navy to launch a new $3,922,000,000 shipbuilding program after this fiscal year ends, the Senate amended the bill to permit construction of replacements for overage vessels and those lost in action.

The Senate added 73 million dollars for maintaining and operating shore activities, 95 million dollars for pay, subsistence and transportation, and $28,900,000 for Marine Corps provisions, clothing and supplies.

It transferred $2,788,000,000 in direct cash appropriations previously approved by the House to contract authority, leaving the total amount of funds made available in the measure only slightly higher than those contained in the bill as it passed the House.

The Navy's planned $3,922,637,000 ship construction program envisions 480,000 tons of vessels ranging in size from small boats to aircraft carriers and heavy cruisers, Congress learned.

Disclosure of the plans came in testimony by Rear Admiral E. L. Cochrane, chief of the Bureau of Ships, made public yesterday by the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Cochrane told the committee that in addition to the 600 ships of all types the Navy expects to complete in the new fiscal year beginning July 1, it has made plans for utilization of the tonnage previously authorized by Congress.

NO. 9 of a series ★ heroic episodes WORLD WAR NO. II

MacArthur on Bataan gave one company of savage Igorots, along with a few American tank units, a position to defend against a crack Japanese regiment. When ordered to counter-attack, the dense jungle was a hopeless puzzle to the American tank drivers. The jungle-wise as monkeys, jumped onto the tops of the tanks, where they served as "eyes" for the drivers inside. They were armored only with their own battle-lust, armed only with their own bolo knives and pistols. "Gentlemen," said MacArthur, "when you tell that story stand in tribute to those gallant Igorots. Bataan has seen many wild mornings, but nothing equal to this. No quarter was asked and none was given. Always above the din of battle rose the fierce shouts of the Igorots as they rode the tanks and fired their pistols. No gun, no thicket, only death itself could stop that mad rush. I have seen last ditch stands and innumerable acts of personal heroism that defy description. But for sheer, breath-taking and heart-stopping desperation, I have never known the equal of those Igorots riding the tanks."

"the boys on Bataan were trapped like rats but they died like men"

★ For our side this war may know no more Bataans, and no more Dunkirks. It may have passed that point up to which the hard road to victory had to be paved with defeats, withdrawals and retreats. But until this war is won Bataan must stand as the American measure of endurance and yardstick for sacrifice. There our troops, both brown and white, lived and died in fulfilling that classic definition of the soldier's duty: to make "his breast the bulwark and his blood the moat." Beside the standard of endurance and sacrifice established in those last dark hopeless days on Bataan, nothing that any of the rest of us are likely to be called upon to endure, on the so-called "home front", can ever honestly be classed as anything but trivial. Rationing and conservation, bonds and taxes, overtime and even overwork—none of that bulks very big beside the price of patriotism that the boys in uniform so gallantly pay. That's why the favor of America's fighting men is so important to us, these days. Quantitatively, the armed forces still do not constitute a majority of the magazine's readership. But qualitatively, we are frank to say, we consider them first. The degree of affection which they have manifested for this magazine, and the intimacy with which they regard it as peculiarly their own, these are the things that count most with us—because these are the men that count most with America, today and tomorrow.

★ Independent surveys have shown that a measurable percentage of America's armed forces (34% is the current estimate) are now reached regularly by Esquire. The Army's own surveys show that 41% of its members regularly read magazines in their off-duty hours.

Evicted

It is doubtful whether the plight of the average refugee bombed out in Europe is any more tragic than that of the 53 persons evicted from Washington slums last week. They had been living in rat-infested quarters without electric lights, with defective plumbing, broken plaster and other earmarks of Washington's worst housing. Overcrowding was close to being intolerable. Rents were scandalously high for the accommodations provided. When the tenants were finally evicted, however, an even worse fate was in store for them, for they could find nowhere else to live.

The difficulties encountered by local officials trying to meet this problem stand out clearly from Mary Spargo's story of the evictions in The Post. As long ago as last November the Health Department attempted to eliminate this particular menace to the health of the community. It charged Jacob Yeager with operating a rooming house without a license and with maintaining less than one bath to every 10 tenants. The case was not heard until May 21, and an appeal from the $200 fine imposed by the Municipal Court is now pending.

This action by the Health Department was probably an indirect cause of the evictions, although the direct cause seems to have been the failure of one agent to pay rent to another agent. In any event, efforts of the local authorities to protect the health of wretchedly housed families frequently result only in their being turned out into the street. It does not necessarily bring about improvement of the hovels in which they lived. Nor is there anything to prevent those hovels from being rented again. Considering the almost complete absence of low-rental housing here, except for inmigrant warworkers, the assumption must be that evacuated houses of any type will be quickly occupied once more. So the complicated fight for decency and health has to begin all over again.

There is, of course, only one real solution of this dilemma, and that is the building of enough low-rental houses to supply the great demands of this mushrooming city. Such a program should be undertaken at the earliest possible date. In the meantime, however, we find it difficult to believe that the technique of dealing with slum racketeers cannot be greatly improved.

Why "Untimely"?

When signing the bill which reduces District unemployment payroll levies, the President applauded the liberalized benefit provisions but criticized the so-called "untimely" reduction in the rate of employer contributions. So far as the District is concerned, the only untimely feature of this reduction is the inexcusable delay in bringing it about.

As The Post has repeatedly pointed out, the payroll levies assessed upon District employers to finance payment of unemployment benefits are not taxes in the ordinary sense of the word. They are funds collected to finance a system of social insurance so that payments made by industry should be adjusted to the cost of the system. District employers however have been paying into the fund many times the amount that could possibly be needed to meet the claims of the insured. According to latest estimates, the reserve fund would suffice to meet all claims on it for the next 15 years if not another dollar were to be collected.

There might be some ground for objecting to a reduction of the District unemployment levy if there were any immediate prospect that the District system of unemployment insurance would shortly be merged into a completely federalized unemployment insurance system. In that case arguments could be offered in favor of using the excess reserves collected from this area to cover deficiencies in other parts of the country. But since the system is decentralized, and is likely to remain so indefinitely there is no valid excuse for compelling District employers to pay many times the sums required to maintain a fully solvent system of unemployment insurance.

In stressing the importance of building up social insurance reserve funds from which payments can be made in case of need later on, President Roosevelt conveniently forgets the nature of these trust funds. It would be an utterly unjustified abuse of the taxing power to step up either unemployment or old-age insurance payroll levies for the purpose of absorbing excess purchasing power, as the President suggests. Unquestionably much heavier taxes are needed to mop up excess income and thereby minimize the danger of uncontrollable inflation. But taxes for such purpose should be imposed with a clear understanding of intention. Enactment of higher levies on payrolls under the pretense that funds are required to finance insurance benefits would be both deceptive and unfair. Nor would that expedient provide the kind of well-balanced, effective system of taxation that the situation demands.

De Gaulle's Victory

It is now apparent from a rereading of last week's confused and often contradictory dispatches out of Algiers that there was considerably more smoke than fire to the general combustion that followed the resignation of M. Marcel Peyrouton as Governor General of Algeria. Two things are now quite clear: first, the French have succeeded in establishing something like a de facto governing body; second, that General de Gaulle is pretty well master of the situation because of the steadily increasing enthusiasm his cause is arousing among Frenchmen everywhere. Whether rightly or wrongly, it is felt that General de Gaulle represents France free and resurgent, whereas General Giraud is the instrument of Anglo-American French policy which, however beneficent, is something quite different. It would help a great deal to remember that we are dealing with a proud, intelligent and sensitive people, acutely conscious of their history and civilization and, moreover, a people just now emerging from a cruel and bitter humiliation. It is precisely to the fact that he has never accepted either defeat or humiliation that General de Gaulle owes his present enormous prestige among his own people.

It is because we have steadily and stubbornly refused to understand or accept this rather simple truth that our French policy has so sadly collapsed, first at Vichy and later in Africa. It is we who have refused to be "realistic," to use our own favorite catchword. It is time that we admitted as much. The efforts of our policy makers to save a modicum of face by an oblique campaign of personal disparagement of De Gaulle seems to us to be capping stupidity with madness. As an instance let us consider all these officially inspired references to the general's supposed "Joan of Arc mentality." De Gaulle, it would seem, is, like the Maid of Orleans, a visionary, obsessed with a sense of his own mission to redeem and restore France. This may indeed make him seem a bit of a crackpot in the eyes of some Americans whose mystical visions have not gone much beyond those of a world in which fear, want, bigotry or oppression will be forever eliminated. But it is much less likely to prejudice him in French eyes, and least of all among French Catholics.

Let us pursue the analogy a bit further. The fifteenth century English considered St. Joan to be the fifteenth century version of a crackpot, that is to say, a witch. Their reasoning in the matter sounded curiously like the rationale of our own French policy. "Nobody," they argued "could have beaten the English in a fair fight. The Maid had beaten them; ergo, the Maid must have had supernatural assistance. But certainly no supernatural powers that would take sides against the English could be beneficent; ergo, the supernatural powers invoked by the Maid were necessarily maleficent." Our own reasoning in the matter seems about as follows: "Events would appear to have vindicated General de Gaulle's policies and to have discredited ours. There is something wrong about this since it is well known that our intentions are always and inevitably in the best interests of everybody concerned. And since whatever is wrong cannot be wrong with us, obviously it must be wrong with de Gaulle."

All the same, General de Gaulle at Algiers appears to have carried all his points save two, and these, the subordination of the military to the new French committee, and the assumption of sovereign status by the committee, are still in abeyance. It is our guess that on these two points the view of General de Gaulle will also prevail in the end. And when and if that happens, it will be high time to change our diplomatic representation in French North Africa.

On Bombing

On the Axis radio no theme is played upon with greater vigor these days than that of the inhumanity of bombing. Hitler and Mussolini can certainly qualify as experts on that subject. The Duce did not hesitate to order his aviators to destroy defenseless Ethiopian villages. Guernica, Warsaw, Rotterdam, Belgrade, London, Coventry and hundreds of other towns provide eloquent testimony as to what Hitler did with his air power when he had it. But now that the Fascist bullies are on the receiving end of aerial bombs, they do not like it. It is their cities that are being laid waste, their factories that are being destroyed, their people who are being made homeless. So that they are now raising the roof with lamentations about the "barbarism" of the enemy.

Of course, the campaign which they have begun and in which they have enlisted their nonbelligerent Axis ally, Spain, will get nowhere. They were the first to break an unwritten understanding. For months after the war began, British planes dropped not bombs but pamphlets on German soil. And it wasn't until the Nazis had broken the tacit truce that the British began to reply in kind. Even then the British and we have been as careful as it is possible to be under the circumstances to attack only military objectives. There is no Rotterdam deliberately laid waste to serve as an example in the record of the Allies; no Belgrade, bombed to bits, though no military purpose whatever was to be served by such wanton destruction.

If the Italians and the Germans want an end put to aerial bombing, now that the punishment they receive is very much greater than the punishment they are capable of dispensing, they can stop it by agreeing to an unconditional surrender. Until then the weapon they employed against us we shall continue to employ against them. It will bring this dreadful war to an end that much sooner. It will save countless lives of our armed forces who otherwise would have to take the fortress of Europe by storm.

Labor Bill

It should not be difficult to reconcile the Senate and House bills to assure continuous operation of essential war plants. While the House went much further than the Senate in curbing and regulating wartime strikes, the basic principles underlying the two bills are much the same. Fortunately the Smith bill originally sent to the House by its Committee on Military Affairs was wholesomely pruned before it reached a final vote. This stripping process ought to have been more thorough than it was, but the conference committee now has an opportunity to complete the job which the House failed to do.

In our opinion the provisions which should go out are Sections 2, 3 and 4. These call for notice and a waiting period before a strike or lockout could be put into effect and for a secret ballot among workers within unions proposing a strike. Unions and labor leaders violating these regulations would be deprived of their standing as collective bargaining agents. Probably the foremost objection to these provisions is that they seem to sanction strikes in war plants under certain conditions. But in any event they are in conflict with later sections of the bill giving the War Labor Board authority to order a cessation of strikes and to prevent employers from changing the conditions of work while cases are being adjudicated by the board. The power to handle situations of this sort can be most effectively exercised by the WLB, and its jurisdiction ought not to be confused by prescribing a general "cooling-off" period with regulations that might or might not be enforced.

We believe that compulsory registration of labor unions, as provided in the House bill, is long overdue. No labor organization operating in the interests of its members has anything to fear from the filing of data regarding its dues, its constitution, its officers and their salaries. Equally urgent is amendment of the Corrupt Practices Act so as to forbid unions to make political contributions. In this respect they should stand on precisely the same footing as corporations, which are already forbidden to support Federal candidates for office out of their coffers. In both instances, however, these reforms should be permanent. Under the House bill they would terminate, along with the rest of the measure, six months after the end of the war.

The most important provisions of both bills are those conferring statutory authority on the WLB and fixing penalties for anyone attempting to frustrate the operation of war plants in the hands of the Government. This provision, of course, strikes hard at John L. Lewis. But we think there can be no serious objection to it. Neither Mr. Lewis nor anyone else has a right to foment or assist strikes against the Government itself. Prompt enactment of penalties for that offense against the Nation will help to clear up the present confusion and to draw a definite line beyond which no self-respecting union or labor leader will go in pressing demands of any sort. This part of the bill is so urgently needed to bolster up the Government's power to mobilize our national strength for war that the conference committee would be wise to strip the bill of any surplusage which might endanger its prompt enactment.

PICNIC ON HURRICANE MOUNTAIN

The pattern of the game was never planned.
They sat with small feet dangling from the rim of green above the storm-dug pit of sand, and then went swishing down the slope with slim, balancing arms wide flung against the air.

A boy slid first and flying after him a girl, the windblown feathers of her hair a nimbus in the crystal mountain light, the others in pursuit of the speed mad pair.

This meaningless, this glad, impulsive flight is the dream complete with every color and sound which curves the lips of a dog-tired man at night, whose plane, bomb-laden, once again has found its mark and once again beneath his hand has safely come to rest upon the ground.

Alaska's Future

By Janet R. Keith

Potential Wealth

CONSTRUCTION OF the Alaska Highway has focused a great deal of attention on the northwestern corner of the continent. No longer is this great area regarded, as it was when the United States purchased Alaska from Russia in 1867, as "a dreary waste of glaciers and icebergs." Both Canada and the United States are beginning to realize that the Great Northwest offers tremendous possibilities for postwar development.

A group of officials under the auspices of the permanent Canadian-American Economic Committee are at present making a study of the most desirable postwar use of the northern Pacific area, including north British Columbia, the Yukon and Alaska. President Roosevelt has authorized a special study of the Alaskan portion of the road by officials of the United States National Parks Service, and it is understood that Canadian officials are conducting a similar survey on the scenic possibilities of their part of the road.

Specific Program

Already the Foreign Policy Association of the United States has put forward a specific program for the future development of Alaska. It suggests that farming areas must be developed and opened up with the aid of extensive Government experimentation, new industries must be developed, extensive surveys undertaken to determine mineral wealth, the fishing industry strengthened by discovery of new uses for fish and fish products, and the whole area covered with a network of roads which will make remote areas accessible.

In considering plans for the future development of this great northern area, it is advisable to inquire into the reasons for its comparative backwardness up to the present time.

Climate has undoubtedly been a handicap. Returning travelers have always been prone to paint in lurid detail the extreme coldness of the winters. Yet actual weather records extending over a considerable period show that the climate in many parts of the Northwest is only slightly more severe than that of the prairies, and is much milder than that of some places at corresponding latitudes. (Siberia, for instance.) Wheat, oats and barley have been grown as far north as Dawson, Yukon, and visitors are often astonished at the quality of northern vegetables and flowers. While it is improbable that agriculture will ever become a major industry, modern horticultural methods should be able to push the cultivation of hardy cereals and fresh vegetables to far-northern latitudes.

Lack of population

Lack of population has hindered the development of natural resources. Great potential wealth is there—timber, fur, fish and game, gold and silver, radium, lead, copper, and oil. There are even great rivers which would supply abundant water power. But there has been no systematic attempt to develop the natural industries of the country.

Transportation, of course, has always been the great bottleneck. There wasn't much point in working a coal mine inland when freight rates were a dollar a pound. Now these transportation obstacles have suddenly been overcome. In 1941 the Canadian government completed a series of airports which link Fairbanks, Alaska with Edmonton, Alberta. This airway, now used by military planes of both Canada and the United States, is expected to play an important part in international air transport after the war.

With the building of the Alaska Highway, the Northwest has at last been linked by land to the rest of North America. The final barrier to development has been knocked down.

Will there be a great influx of settlers to Alaska, Yukon and the surrounding territory after the war? It seems hardly likely that the governments of Canada and the United States will permit a repetition of the old gold rush days. The country is potentially wealthy, but it is still tough. It needs men, but men specially trained to make a living in a specialized country.

Perhaps many of the engineers and military men now stationed there, having become accustomed to the climate, will want to stay after the war. Or it may be decided to settle colonies of returned veterans. But if there is to be emigration, it should be systematic. The Northwest has suffered for too long from neglect on the one hand and haphazard exploitation on the other.

When future settlement is being planned, one class of inhabitant should not be forgotten. Some 30,000 of Alaska's 80,000 people are native Indians and Eskimos. In the brave new civilization that is to come, there should be a really worthwhile place for these original settlers.

The Revolt In Argentina

THE SUDDEN resignation of Gen. Arturo Rawson as president of Argentina, only 28 hours after a successful military coup had swept him into office, has added a new twist to an already strangely tangled situation.

Up to the very moment when the rebellion broke out last week, there appeared to be no reason to doubt that President Ramon S. Castillo would serve out his full term in the Casa Rosada, the Argentine equivalent of our White House. It was also taken for granted that, with the electoral machinery in the government's hands, he would succeed in naming his successor.

IT IS TRUE that Castillo and his government had never enjoyed any great popular backing. The great majority of Argentinians vigorously opposed him because, through his pro-Axis orientation, he had made the name of Argentina a hissing and a byword throughout the Americas.

Castillo was also disliked because, in an effort to keep down popular expressions of sympathy for the Allies and opposition to the Axis, he had proclaimed and maintained a state of siege in Argentina.

But Castillo was safe so long as he had the support of the Argentine police force and of the army. And since that army had long been notorious for its anti-democratic, pro-Axis leanings (this was particularly true of some of its highest placed officers) the assumption was that a revolt from that quarter was out of the question. Yet, it was precisely from that direction that Castillo got his coup de grace.

WHAT HAPPENED in Argentina on Friday, however, was not a revolution; it was a collapse. At the first sign of forcible opposition the Castillo regime simply crumbled away, like a rope of sand in a gust of wind.

The military leaders responsible for the coup d'etat acted on their own and not as the spearpoint of a popular movement. It was not love of democracy which motivated them, or friendship for the United States or the United Nations, but simply disgust over Castillo's blundering course.

What angered them was not that Castillo had been pro-Axis—many of them had also been pro-Axis in the days when the Wehrmacht was sweeping across Europe—but that he had continued to be pro-Axis when such a policy had began to run afoul of the law of diminishing returns.

Unlike Castillo, they knew a winning bandwagon when they saw one and, again unlike Castillo, they didn't mind climbing aboard regardless of the shape and color and direction of the vehicle they had previously been riding.

This is not to say that within the junta there are not those who sincerely favor the Allied cause and who have always believed that Argentina's best interests would be served by a policy of cooperation with the Allies and with the other American republics. There are, undoubtedly, many democratic-minded officers in the Argentine army.

But what was basically behind Castillo's overthrow by army leaders was not a difference over principles but a disagreement over practices.

LIKE MOST of his predecessors, Ramon Castillo pampered the Argentine army. It got everything it asked for except, of course, the things that the Argentine government could not furnish.

Unfortunately for Castillo, what his government could not furnish was precisely what the Argentine leaders were most anxious to get, namely, the latest model planes, guns and tanks. These could only come from abroad, which, under existing circumstances, meant that they could only come from the United States.

But we have had other and better uses for our war production than to supply the one nation which has given shelter to Axis agents which, despite its international commitments, has steadfastly refused to be governed by the dictates of hemisphere solidarity.

So the Argentine military leaders found their nation falling behind in a military sense. Lend-lease supplies, including the very latest type planes, were sent to Brazil, to Uruguay, to Chile—but not to Argentina. This state of affairs could hardly help but anger the Argentine army chiefs. And since the policy responsible for it was Castillo's own, it was Castillo who was blamed for it.

IT WAS EASY enough for the Argentine army to get rid of Castillo. To govern Argentina is another matter. The army leaders have neither the training nor the temperament for the job. That is, no doubt, why a practically unopposed coup d'etat has been followed by a period of fantastic confusion.

Can we expect that out of Argentina's present bed of thistles we shall be able to harvest a crop of figs? The first cabinet formed by the junta following the overthrow of Castillo was, if anything, even more reactionary and even more pro-Axis than that of Castillo. But this circumstance should not worry us too much. The overthrow of Castillo does pave the way for a reorientation of Argentine foreign policy.

The same motives that led the military leaders to rebel will force them to carry through the changes needed to bring Argentina in line with the other nations of this hemisphere. Certainly unless this is done there is little likelihood that there will be any change in our policy toward Argentina. In a situation that is full of confusion we should keep our eye on that fixed fact.

Conserving Gas

The cabbie, 5,500 in number, is doing his best to cooperate with the PUC, OPA and ODT in the interest of conserving gas and tires and at the same time speeding up transportation of passengers to and from work.

There is yet room for improvement of gas conservation and speedier transportation. With a little more cooperation from the traffic commissioner and the riding public, much could be done toward reaching this goal.

If the commissioner would eliminate a large number of unnecessary "no left turn," "no U turn," and "through only" signs, the gas consumption and mileage, not only of cabs, but of all motor traffic, would be greatly reduced.

And if the riding public would try just a little harder to group itself according to destination, when traveling to and from work, it would aid greatly in arriving at a satisfactory cab sharing system.

Damage To Labor

For 12 years labor has been fortunate in having the sympathetic aid of the Administration, and rightly so, for they were in need of such aid and deserved it, as most of the people in the country would agree. But now, because of the stubborn shortsightedness of their leader, they have incurred not only the anger of the President, but of the entire country. By these strikes at such an inopportune time, the labor leaders are doing their cause more damage than can be repaired in another half-century. Labor was on its way to a new era of high living standards and respect, but they have lost those things they have been fighting for by their attitude in this war. After the war the Administration and the people will have little sympathy for the claims of a group that tried to further their own ends at a time when the Nation needed their cooperation most.

Misrepresented

While it is rather late, I feel that the record should be made and the facts established in connection with the materials of Mr. Drew Pearson, appearing in his column in The Post on March 14th. The whole tenor of the article was misleading and scarcely a statement in it was factually correct, but a number of the inaccuracies were so grave and so important that I feel they should be publicly corrected.

In the first place, I am not and have not been on the payroll of the Navy. I did assist for several months the firm of Management Engineers whose services were used or contracted for by the Navy.

Second, the statement that the Navy was in any way involved or interested in the congressional discussion of the liquidation of the HOLC is ridiculous and untrue. As far as I know, the Secretary of the Navy has no knowledge of or interest in the HOLC or congressional discussions about it, nor was I in his office.

Third, I was a member of the original Federal Home Loan Bank Board in 1932, before the HOLC was in existence. I was not appointed "to the HOLC" nor "failed of reappointment," as Mr. Pearson says.

Fourth, the inclusion by Mr. Pearson in his column of an excerpt from an article reprinted from Whaley - Eaton's "Sphere" and the inference that a sentence taken from its context represents my views is unfair and inaccurate. My own views appeared over my own signature, as Mr. Pearson could have ascertained if he had looked at the document which transmitted the article. This was in July, 1940, soon after the fall of France, and I transmitted the article to our membership as a thought-provoking indictment of softness, dollar-madness and indifferent and unrealistic attitudes in many countries and our own. Anyone who was aware of the world situation at that time and convinced of the role which America would eventually have to play would naturally be considering where we stood as a nation of fighting material.

These are the more glaring misstatements, but the article abounds in others which I will not take the time or space to discuss. I have put the facts before Mr. Pearson himself, but he has not seen fit to clear the record.

Marine Band

Wednesday night a very appreciative crowd gathered on the steps and east lawn of the Capitol to witness the first open-air Marine Band concert of the season. Among the selections were the "Spanish Caprice," "Canadian Capers" and the Hungarian Rhapsody, No. 14, all of which the audience appeared to appreciate. As a measure of conserving gasoline, the band marched both to and from the concert. Going into the Marines soon myself, I wanted to know if I could take a little hiking before entering. I could, and while marching along these are some of the comments made by the townspeople:

"They must be hot in those high-neck blouses."

"They surely know how to march." "Bet they've really drilled to be able to fall in like that."

"Don't you know that drummer gets tired carrying that big drum?"

"They must be walking 20 steps per minute."

"They can march almost as good as the Air Corps Cadets."

"Captain Santelman is a great fellow and seems very proud of his men."

"Mary, did you see that last fellow wink at me?"

"I'd hate to carry that tuba."

"Marching 15 blocks to give a free concert is what I call real patriotism."

"Wonder if that xylonphonist is married?" (This was my comment.)

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Name In A Casualty List

"In Africa, Wilbur Smith, Willow Falls, Mass.; next of kin, mother, Mrs. Charles Smith, Willow Falls."

Somehow that entry in the casualty lists brings the war home. Wilbur Smith . . . why, he was "Red" Smith's boy . . . the Argyle Road Smiths!

Wilbur was just a kid romping around the fields of Willow Falls . . . fishing in the Wepawaug . . . playing "catch" on the school ball team . . . taking off gates on Halloween night . . . swiping loose wood for the Fourth of July bonfires!

He was such a good-natured, pleasure-loving youngster.

He could take care of himself in a scrap, but he was the easygoing, tolerant, hard-to-arouse type. He was always grinning.

I remember running over to the Smiths on a Christmas Eve once and helping trim the tree, the first one Wilbur was old enough to comprehend . . . There were all sorts of presents, but I remember a set of toy soldiers most of all now!

It seems only a few days ago that he was toddling around the Smith porch just learning to walk . . . falling down . . . getting up . . . tumbling over again, but always getting up laughing. I got a picture of Wilbur on his first three-wheeler, tearing up and down the street, making a noise he seemed to think was like a siren.

Then one day I saw him in a football uniform, looking a little ridiculous, but coming back from practice. He had a shiner. And it sort of disturbed Mrs. Smith. But Wilbur kept saying, "Aw, mom, it's all in the game. Y'gotta expect to get hurt a little now and then."

Then there was the time a big, gangling boy came to cut the grass. It was Wilbur, but I didn't know him, he'd grown so. He used to deliver the paper and sell us The Post, too . . . I can see him now, dropping the lawn mower at the tinkle of the Good Humor cart . . . or forgetting all about the grass while he followed the flight of a robin to a nest in the fir . . . and climbed up to get a look at the young ones.

He kept pigeons and bantams and liked to hunt squirrels . . . He was the typical barefoot boy with cheek of tan.

With thy turned-up pantaloons,
And thy merry whistled tunes;
With thy red lips, redder still
Kissed by strawberries on the hill;
With the sunshine on thy face,
Through thy torn brim's jaunty grace . . .

It couldn't have been longer ago than last year that I saw his picture in the village paper as the boy voted "the best liked in his high school graduation class."

I remember seeing a crowd at the station one fall morning and asking, "What's up?"

"Big crowd of boys going out today," said Eb Hill.

It was another group of lads off for the draft camp . . . Wilbur was there . . .

I hadn't seen the Smiths in a long time.

And now . . . "In Africa, Wilbur Smith, Willow Falls . . ."

That sort of does it to me, inside.

Those words keep coming back, "Aw mom, it's all in the game. Y'gotta expect to get hurt a little now and then . . ."

Sweden's "Burden"

By Walter Deaf

German Soldiers Through Sweden

SUMMER, 1940, saw the breakdown of Norway's defense against Hitler's armored invaders after months of hard fighting.

The Swedes regarded it as a miracle that war had raged so colse to them without kindling their own houses. The days after April 9, 1940, the day of the German attack had been critical. The Skagerrak became a German mass tomb. Raeder called the losses in a verbal report to Hitler "surprisingly heavy" and the Fuehrer commissioned Herr Ribbentrop to demand Sweden's permission for transit of German troops. This was done. A speedy answer was required. It came. The answer suprised Ribbentrop. Sweden declared that it would keep neutral under any circumstances and, in order to eliminate all doubts, Sweden mobilized.

Hitler hesitated—as always in decisive moments. A war against Sweden, he figured, would fatally prolong the Scandinvian campaign, which had to be conducted as "blitz" attack and concluded as such. In this way the battle for western Europe would be delayed and that had to be avoided. Thus Sweden witnessed the conquest of Norway as mere spectator.

Agreement With Germany

The Swedish government in summer, 1940, made it known that an agreement with the German government had been reached according to which German soldiers belonging to the occupation army in Norway were allowed to pass over Sweden in considerable numbers on their way to Germany as "soldiers on leave," and a corresponding number of German soldiers could pass through Swedish territory in the opposite direction. The government decree went on saying that all these "soldiers on leave" had to be unarmed and would be under severe Swedish control from the moment they crossed the Swedish frontiner. This control, however, could not calm those Swedes who saw in the agreement the fact that Swedish help war rendered to the occupation army in Norway.

While Hitler was striking blows against the west, Quisling began his regime of terror under the protection of German tanks. Waves of arrest flooded all Norway, hundreds of democrats were robbed of eir freedom. Laborers, officials, students and professors filled the Norwegian prisons and concentration camps. Bishops were removed from office and confined, contrary to all laws. The feeling of discomfort that the Swedes experienced in view of fallen Norway gave rouse to a wave of ire. "Then everything we were told about the Nazi methods in Germany was true," said many hundreds of Swedes, who up until then had met all tales of Himmler's terror with scepticism or without interest.

While Holland was overrun, Belgium beaten and France conquered with terror, bombs and tanks, the heroic resistance of the Norwegian people against Joseph Terboven's attempt to introduce the "new order" created an atmosphere in Sweden which made more and more people ask themselves anxiously: "Can we allow soldiers, who are Norway's enemies, to be transported by our railways?"

Hundreds of Conferences

Since then this question has long ago been answered with "No." Hundreds of conferences have been held in the meantime in which this answer came unanimously, individuals and organizations gave it unmistakably. A newspaper like Stockholms-Tidningen, which had not for a moment during this war been guilty of an anti-Nazi attitude, wrote on April 4 this year that the whole of the Swedish people would enthusiastically greet the day when this transit traffic could be stopped without danger to "Sweden's peace." On the same day an official report on the furlough transports was published.

The report explains that the number of soldiers traveling to Germany tallies with the number going in the opposite direction and says finally that no war material is transported on those trains.

For civilian German passengers, also those belonging to the German armed forces, two cars are reserved twice weekly between Storlien—in the frontier between Norway and Sweden—and Haparanda, on the frontier between Finland and Sweden. Swedish military and police officials accompany these transports all these routes. The Germans are fed with their own supplies, part of which comes from Norway. Beside this passenger traffic, the official report also mentions the transport of German goods to Norway which is carried out with German freight cars. These cars can be used to transport Swedish goods within Sweden on their way back.

This enlightening report also informs the Swedish public that four cars a week transport German soldiers from Norway through Swedish territory to Finland which is at war with the Soviet Union, Great Britain and some of the Allied countries.

That part of the Swedish Prime Minister Per Albin Hansson's speech on April 4 should be taken as a complement to the above-mentioned report in which he calls the Swedish permission for German transit traffic through Sweden a "burden" which Sweden must carry. There is no doubt—as I could understand from many conversations—that the Swedish population would like to get rid of this "burden" today rather than tomorrow. But coal is a weighty argument—and Sweden can, for the moment, get coal only from Germany. The majority of the Swedish people hopes that the government will recognize the right moment when the German coal, which is not always received in the quantities agreed upon, is no longer worth the risk of complications with other powers, more important to Sweden after the war, and many think that this moment has come. In authoritative circles there are few doubts about the outcome of the war.

Acts Barring Chinese Hit

New Bill Offered

By the Associated Press

Undismayed by a setback yesterday in the House Immigration Committee, sponsors of a movement to repeal Chinese Exclusion Acts immediately offered a new bill.

The new measure, introduced by Representative Gossett (Democrat) of Texas, committee member, is based on a bill which failed to win approval during a stormy executive session.

Chairman Dickstein (Democrat) of New York said introduction of the measure meant "starting again almost from scratch" and that new hearings possibly including testimony by State Department representatives, would be held.

Members determined to obtain some kind of bill to delete from the statutes what they termed the "stigma" of Chinese exclusion said they hoped to report to the House a measure that could be acted upon before Congress recessed for the summer.

Meanwhile a committee member said opponents of the movement had stated in executive session they would be willing to have the exclusion acts wiped off the books but not willing to permit immigration of Chinese to this country.

Describing such sentiment "preposterous" one supporter said privately this would have the effect of saying to the Chinese:

"We no longer prohibit you from entering this country, but we will not permit you the immigration quota on which to enter."

Representative Magnuson (Democrat) of Washington told reporters if a measure were introduced which merely repealed the exclusion acts, he would immediately offer an amendment to provide entry of Chinese on a quota basis.

Admiral, Scientist To Get Degrees

Degrees of doctor of science will be conferred today by Tampa University upon Rear Admiral Charles E. Rosendahl, former Washington resident now chief of the Navy's airship personnel training command at Lakehurst, N. J., and Matthew W. Stirling, prominent Washington scientist.

Admiral Rosendahl is the Navy's foremost authority on lighter-than-air craft and was one of the few persons to survive the destruction of a dirigible and circumnavigate the globe by airship.

Stirling has been chief of the Bureau of American Ethnology of the Smithsonian Institution since 1928. He is a native of Salinas, Calif.

Wartime Washington

Power To Carry On The War

AFTER A YEAR and a half of war Congress has apparently decided to invoke its power to undercut any group that tries to sabotage the war effort to win advantages for itself. That is the meaning of the emphatic vote in the House last week for the Harness-Smith substitute for the Connally bill previously passed by the Senate. Leaving aside the details of the two bills, this move to reassert the power of the Government to carry on the war in spite of John L. Lewis and his ilk is one of the most constructive steps that the present Congress has taken.

PUSEY

There is much confusion over what Congress has done. Some of that confusion probably arises from the fact that the House acted in haste without a printed copy of the bill before it. More important, however, is a widespread misunderstanding as to the chief issue by which both branches of the National Legislature were confronted. The people have been told repeatedly that Congress was considering "antistrike legislation." The mere use of those words aroused antagonism among many friends of labor, for the right to strike is properly regarded as the chief weapon that can be employed by labor to win fair compensation from employers.

Now neither the Connally bill nor the House-approved substitute would deny the right to strike in the traditional meaning of that word. It is true that the House bill attempts to put collective bargaining ahead of strikes in disputes within war industries. Probably this part of the bill needs further pruning. But the real "teeth" of both bills come into play only when the authority of the Government itself is threatened.

THIS IS a point of the greatest importance. Congress is attempting primarily to assert the power of the Government to carry on this global war without being stabbed in the back by union leaders who think it is more important to force wages skyward than to supply fuel, munitions, rubber and other essentials to the men at the fronts.

Congress does not presume to say, even in wartime, that unions shall not strike against their employers. The criminal penalties which both houses have approved for anyone attempting to interfere with the operation of war plants would apply only in cases where the Government has been forced to take over war plants to keep them in operation. In other words, Congress would make it a crime to aid or foment strikes among employes working directly for the Government.

Obviously this restriction does not destroy the right of collective bargaining, for there is no such right as collective bargaining with the Government. No group can rightly say to the Government, "You may continue the war under the terms we have laid down." Nor can any employer or union leader be permitted to deprive the Government of the sinews of war until his terms have been met. That basic principle was recognized as to employers long before Pearl Harbor. Its tardy recognition as to union leaders merely completes the powers that the Government must have to assure our national self-preservation.

EVEN THE Administration appears to have belatedly swung around to this view. At any rate, Administration leaders in the House marshaled their influence behind the Connally bill at the eleventh hour. For the policy of trying to appease men like John L. Lewis has proved to be a flat failure. It should have been recognized as a dangerous policy from the very beginning. The fate of the Nation cannot safely be left to mere understandings or bargains between the President and private groups, which may turn out, as in the case of the miners' no-strike pledge, to be nothing more than a scrap of paper.

Assuming that a satisfactory compromise between the Senate and House bills can be worked out, the effect of this legislation on the coal strike may be decisive. With either bill on the books, a further revolt against Government authority might leave John L. Lewis looking out between bars. At the same time the basic rights of labor remain protected. Both bills specifically leave the individual worker free to quit his job if he wishes to do so. The right to strike against private employers is left largely to the control of labor itself under the no-strike pledge, and the War Labor Board on which workers and employers alike must rely for a fair adjustment of grievances which cannot be ironed out by collective bargaining is notably strengthened.

The implications of this courageous act on the part of Congress are even more far-reaching. Congress has once more asserted its power to protect the national interest against powerful internal pressure. It has said that the Government elected by the people as a whole is supreme and that it must not kowtow to any unscrupulous little dictator who may challenge its authority to carry on the war. If Congress and the Administration adhere to this sound principle, our democratic system will be greatly strengthened to withstand the shocks that it must inevitably meet in the last stages of the war as well as in the postwar period.

South Dakota Labor Opposed to Lewis

Watertown, S. Dak., June 7.—A resolution opposing readmission of John L. Lewis into the American Federation of Labor was approved unanimously by the South Dakota Federation of Labor at convention sessions Sunday.

The resolution approval followed condemnation of Lewis' policies by Joseph Ozanic, who was on the program as a representative of William Green, president of the A. F. of L.

Plant to Plead Nolo Contendre

Service in War Faked by Grocer, FBI Charges

A 30-year-old local grocery store manager was arraigned yesterday and pleaded not guilty before Needham C. Turnage, United States Commissioner, on a number of charges, including violating the Selective Service Act, illegally wearing an Army uniform, illegally wearing the American Defense Service Bar, the Distinguished Service Cross and the Order of the Purple Heart.

It was all done, according to the FBI, to impress the grocer's bride. Shenker is alleged to have divorced a former wife in June, 1942, and to have a 3-year-old daughter by that marriage. His present wife is reported to be an expectant mother.

The FBI charges Benjamin Shenker came to Washington from Philadelphia in 1942 and soon married into a prominent District family. At the marriage, they said, Shenker called himself Captain van Shenker and wore the appropriate uniform with almost as many medals as are sported by Herman Goering.

150 Axis Locomotives Knocked Out in May

London, June 7 (AP).—R. A. F. planes knocked out about 150 locomotives in Germany, France and the Low Countries during May in Intruder patrols aimed at disrupting Adolf Hitler's overburdened communications system, the Air Ministry announced today.

A large number of freight trains, signal boxes, sidings and barges also were shot up, the announcement said.

Miss Cornell Ends Season That Confounded Skeptics

Ruth Gordon to Summer in Capital; Warner Brothers Plan Biggest Yet; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

IT SAYS in the announcement that "Ruth Gordon will pass the summer in Washington, D. C., where her husband, Pvt. Garson Kanin, is now on duty."

That will be a brilliant addition to the Capital's theatrical colony, so greatly augmented by the war. Pending her arrival, Miss Gordon will not be exactly out of public view. It is she who plays the brief, but important, role of Mrs. Jarvis, wife of Capt. Steve Jarvis—and that would be Raymond Massey—in the Warner Brothers production of "Action in the North Atlantic," being previewed by a distinguished audience in the Departmental Auditorium tonight and coming to the screen at the Earle Theater on Friday.

RUTH GORDON

Miss Gordon's last appearance on a local stage was as one of the costellar associates of Katharine Cornell in the distinguished actress-manager's revival of Chekhov's "The Three Sisters," given its premiere at the National the week of last August 30, to overwhelming acclaim, and by way of launching a record run that has attracted nothing less than standing-room patronage since its opening here.

And that is what brings the whole matter up.

On Saturday night, at the Erlanger Theater, in Chicago, Miss Cornell will close "The Three Sisters," after having achieved a record with the Russian classic, held by some to be one of Chekhov's minor works. It will have scored a season of 230 performances, an all-time high for the play in English—and for any production of Chekhov in English, here or abroad. It opened in Chicago to an advance sale of $40,000 and will have grossed $100,000 in the Windy City, come Saturday night.

So, getting back to what started out to be the beginning of these remarks, Miss Cornell's star-studded cast will disband next week, thus dismembering one of the most notable acting ensembles ever assembled and one, incidentally, which many wiseacres last August were sure "The Three Sisters" could not "pay off." Miss Cornell will return immediately to New York, preparatory to a summer with her cows, chickens and victory gardening at Martha's Vineyard, her habitual retreat these past several years. Judith Anderson will be off to her home at Pacific Palisades, not too far from Hollywood, also for a little victory gardening. Edmund Gwenn comes back to New York to fulfill a radio commitment, then to the coast and the films. Tom Powers and Alexander Knox will go directly to Hollywood, while Dennis King and Gertrude Musgrove will return to New York. Their association in "Sisters" will not soon be forgotten by those who saw it.

Another Novelty on the Fire

With "Mission to Moscow" continuing to smash records at the Hollywood Theater, in New York—and most everywhere else, for that matter—Warner Brothers' executive producer, Jack L. Warner, now is reported to be rushing plans for another super-duper which also will shatter a few precedents.

This is the "Battle Cry" item, which, like "Air Force," "Mission," "Action in the North Atlantic" and so many others, will deal trenchantly with the global melee now raging. There will be no story continuity. Remotedly like "Tales of Manhattan," "Battle Cry" will consist of a series of separate episodes threaded together by a central theme. The causes that impel individuals in all the United Nations to fight for freedom will comprise that theme.

This is going to be no "short." From the present outlook, "Battle Cry" is expected to spool up something like 18 reels of celluloid. That will be a couple longer than "Gone With the Wind," if that isn't too much of a shock for hot weather.

As I recall it—and I'm too lazy to look in the book—"GWTW" was a "quickie" that only ran 3 hours and 47 minutes, or something like that!

Beatrice Kay, known to many through her appearances on radio's "Gay Nineties Revue," and who will be coming along Thursday to headline the stage bill at Loew's Capitol Theater, is as versatile in her general interests as in her singing, so they say. Although on the stage since childhood, it is being bruited about that she is a pushover for gardening—victory or otherwise—an elegant cook and a conscientious collector of "Gay Nineties" costumes. Furthermore, Miss Kay has been chosen by John Powers, who should know, as the possessor of the "prettiest legs in radio." Come on, you television!

Earl Robinson, who, with John Latouche, wrote "Ballad for Americans" and "Battle Hymn," coming up as a spectacular "production number" at Loew's Capitol, also is identified, as it turns out, with the Washington Workshop's forthcoming production of "It's Up to You." The "food show" score includes five Robinson tunes—the title song, "Get the Point, Mrs. Brown," "You Can Take It," "Victory Begins at Home" and "Porterhouse Lucy, the Black Market Steak." Music for the show is being directed by Tom Glazer, of the Library of Congress staff.

HEDDA HOPPER

You Figure It Out!

Hollywood, Calif., June 7.—You can't figure Hollywood. After Budd Schulberg wrote "What Makes Sammy Run?" he had more jobs here than he could handle. Since George Jessel tells how unfair Hollywood has been to him—and everything else—in his book, he's signed for $2000 a week by Joseph Schenck . . Sam Bischoff will do "Lebensraum" as his first postwar picture. It means "living room," and the guilty Nazis who started the war and backed all the atrocities will be brought before a tribunal and dealt with in the proper way. It will get an all-star cast. It would have to, to follow Hitler, Goebels, Von Ribbentrop, etc. . . . Now that Fred Astaire has gone over to England to entertain our soldiers it can be reported . . . Marty Rackin wrote "Bombardiers" and joins the Army next week—as a bombardier.

GEORGE JESSEL

Will Repeat History

There's a new picture company in England called Two Cities. Its first will be "Henry V," with Laurence Oliver. Battle scenes will be done in Ireland. If you remember your history, Henry V, made an invasion of France, also. . . . It was more fun when Orson Welles got Rita Hayworth into his black bag magic act, and then lost the key. That is, fun for everybody except Rita. . . . Harpo Marx, with harp and props; Ann Sheridan, Gracie McDonald, and Linda Darnell are off to Yuma for a show there to help raise funds for a much needed swimming pool for soldiers.

The War Did It

No American gangsters are allowed on the screen in any of our pictures reaching foreign lands. From now on we're sweet, kind and good. Guess that means "Life of Touhy" will be played in America only. . . . Kay Kyser's new slogan, which he's offering to the Japs for Navy recruiting overheard at the Brown Derby, is "Join the Navy and see the next world." Ish Kabible is getting his big chance in "Around the World" (which Kay wants to do). Ish broke up the company three times during a take. . . . What's all this about Mary Ann Hyde and Errol Flynn? . . . The title-changing act is in full swing-time again. "Sahara" was changed to "Somewhere in Sahara." Columbia was afraid you'd think it was about dancing girls. Now that war pictures are taboo, it wants you to think it's about dancing girls, so it's "Sahara" again. "Officers' Candidate School" is now "There's Something About a Soldier."

Hart in Heart of It

Moss Hart, in an Army bomber, stopped off here two days. He'll fly to all our outposts, gathering material for a show a la "This Is the Army" for the air forces emergency fund. He heard Danny Kaye sing some new numbers for his picture, then called Sam Goldwyn to ask, "How much will it cost to buy into it?" I asked whether he was taking his own psychiatrist along. The answer was, "No, they've got one at each camp." And I'll bet my buttons he'll come back with an idea for a new play on that subject, too . . . The Brentwood Players are so successful I'm told the naval aid auxiliary will open a new Hollywood theater for them . . . Elizabeth Patterson tells me bell boys at her hotel are so young she feels like carrying a cookie jar around with her instead of tips . . . Bob Burns gets the part of Chips, the old prospector, in "Buffalo Bill." 'Twill be his first picture in a long time.

No Retakes

Gosh! It's a good thing "Russian War" didn't have to cease for repairs and rewrites and cooling off, as Gregory Ratoff's picture, "Russia," at Metro has done. And they've another month to go. Each day Robert Taylor is more anxious to join the army. . . . Seton Miller has the production job on "Mystery of Fear," which will be an American "39 Steps," with Ray Milland and the new Gail Russell co-starred. . . . June Vincent, newcomer, phoned to tell me that her first Universal picture will be the lead in "Second Honeymoon." And is she happy! Happy, too, that her preacher father could spend a week with her. . . . Deanna Durbin was asked for 10 pictures of herself by a private at the canteen, and said, "Why 10?" "Well, my sergeant is crazy about you, and I figure if I give him 10, I'll get out of that many K. P. duties!"

Night Owling

Hazel Scott of the bee-stung lip and sepia color took the piano apart at the Mocombo. The place was jammed, and I overheard a producer say, "When she does another picture, I'm going to see she's photographed in profile." Sitting at her elbow was Vincent Youmans, whose telephone is ringing 24 hours a day, because he's casting a new show for Broadway with a Cuban background

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

A Sabbatical Holiday

Hollywood, June 6 (INS).—Joan Crawford has taken a six-months' leave of absence from M-G-M, with permission from her studio, to make an outside picture. A surprising arrangement, engineered by Mike Levee, Joan's agent. At the end of the six months she returns to Metro to complete the remaining year and a half of her contract.

JOAN CRAWFORD

Two offers are being discussed for La Crawford, and both interesting. One is with Hunt Stromberg, who is bringing back a screen play for her from New York, and the other with Hal Wallis for Warner Brothers. Joan must have changed her mind, for after her "Rain" fiasco she said she would never leave her own studio.

"Animal Kingdom," the problem child of the Warner lot, is no longer a problem because Jack Warner came home and ordered the story shelved. He considered the script too censorable. So that left Ann Sheridan, Alexis Smith and Jack Carson minus a movie. Producer Bill Jacobs was summoned and told to put "Shine On, Harvest Moon," the life story of Nora Bayes, into immediate production. All members of "The Animal Kingdom" cast were transferred to the Bayes story with the exception of Alexis Smith, who is being replaced by Irene Manning. Ann Sheridan plays the Bayes role, and since Irene is a singer, too, there must be another warbling part around somewhere.

Linda Darnell, radiant and happy as a lark, ended her suspension at Twentieth Century-Fox last week and goes back on salary. She took a suspension a few days after her marriage to Peverell Marley because, she said, the dancing in "The Girls He Left Behind," as Tony De Marco's dancing partner, was too strenuous. I met Linda and her chum. Ann Miller, admiring novelties in a jewelry window—just like any other two girls. "I am back on salary," she told me," and I go into 'Buffalo Bill,' the Harry Sherman picture." She said she was glad to play opposite Joel McCrea because she considers him one of the screen's best actors.

Bob Brumby, I. N. S. correspondent who has been in the Guadalcanal area, has been, in Hollywood the last few days. He has written a story about jungle fighting and at the moment Twentieth is reading it.

OBIT: The hospital at West Point's air base, Stewart Field, will have a day-room named after an enlisted man who never went to West Point. The United States Military Academy, in recognition of his heroism while working under the command of West Point hero Colin P. Kelly, jr., will name its day-room for enlisted men "The Sergeant Meyer Levin Room."

PHOTO DEPARTMENT: Eliot Elisofon, Life's photographer in North Africa, was assigned to photograph the Sultan of Morocco. Just before the cameraman entered the Sultan's throne-room, he was warned that he must bow three times before addressing the Sultan . . . Elisofon bowed once—and noticed, when he looked down at the camera, suspended from his neck, that the Sultan was in perfect focus. He bowed a second time, and snapped a picture. Then bowed a third time, and snapped another picture. These two close-ups will feature a forthcoming issue of the magazine.

POLITICS: Lou Maxon, the tough advertising executive, was being examined by the Truman Committee. One belligerent Senator started to examine the OPA executive. "When you took your job," said the Senator, sarcastically, "didn't you say you'd have everything corrected in a few weeks?" . . . "Senator," Maxon replied, "you can't reform a house of ill-fame just by changing the operators."

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT: A few years ago a retired business man in Miami hired a local electrician to perfect a machine to locate sunken ships. In their first treasure hunt they located a British ship which had been sunk in 1793. Divers went down, and came up with Spanish gold-pieces . . . Two years ago, when war seemed imminent, they brought their machine to Lieut. Col. Blent and Lawrence Langner, of the National Inventors Council. The machine was accepted, and first it was used by the Medical Corps, to locate shrapnel which had entered the bodies of soldiers. Then it was used in explosive factories, to detect dangerous metal carried by employes. And that machine, born of a retired man's boyhood dream of hunting sunken treasures, helped to win the war in Africa—for it now is the best mine-locater in the world.

MOVIES: Groucho Marx played in a foursome in Hollywood with a stranger who laughed hysterically whenever mention was made of the wallpaper routine used in the Marx Brothers film, "A Day at the Races." . . . Groucho soon tired of this laughter and finally said: "We've done a hundred routines which were funnier than that. . . . "Yeah, but I'm in the wallpaper business," the stranger replied, "and I had a lot of bum stock I was about to throw away—when along came M.-G.-M. and bought it all for $800, to use in that picture."

LOCAL NEWS: The Attorney-General's office may have some news soon for John L. Lewis . . . Count Potocki, the former Polish Ambassador to this country, now is in Peru. He grows tea there . . . Billy Rose signed Hassard Short, to stage his production of Oscar Hammerstein's "Carmen Jones." . . . Sabu, the Elephant Boy and film actor, received his first citizenship papers as well as his induction notice, a few days ago . . . George Raft has agreed upon his next film role—that of a Marine, in "All My Love, Joe" . . . Carl Sandburg's next book will be called "Home Front Memo." One of its principal targets will be Charles Lindbergh.

PERSONALS: Paulette Goddard was in the Champagne Room, wearing a necklace which featured at least 50 diamonds, each weighing more than four carats . . . "That's a remarkable necklace," said Ham Fisher, admiringly . . . "I acquired it quite simply," Miss Goddard confessed, "—just by getting engaged so often."

WAR DEPARTMENT: When the war news was somewhat depressing, a group of Hollywood screen writers sat in Mike Romanoff's, mournfully. Only one of them, the Baroness Lili Hatvany, seemed gay and undisturbed . . . "Don't you read the papers?" a troubled writer reminded her . . . "Oh, you mean the war? Well, there's nothing to worry about," said the Hungarian-born Baroness. "All I know is that in 1000 years of history, Hungary never was on the winning side of any war."

Unhappy General Unhappy Again

Hollywood.—Ivan Triesault, who was liquidated in "Mission to Moscow" in his role as the faithless Russian Gen. Mikhail Tukhachevsky, has been signed for another unhappy part in "Animal Kingdom," which Irving Rapper is currently directing. In the new film Triesault plays a gloomy Russian pianist who cries when he plays and who plays all the time because he enjoys a good cry.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Back-Stage Events In Coal Crisis

THE INSIDE STORY of the coal negotiations, confronting the Nation with one of its worst labor crises in history, has never been told completely. Unfortunately it is a story of prima donna bickering, with John L. Lewis not the only culprit, but the War Labor Board standing on its high-hat dignity, and many of the coal operators all too anxious to use the coal crisis as a means of discrediting the President's prolabor policy.

Most important chapter in the story begins on Sunday, May 2, at which time the President gave Secretary of the Interior Ickes control of the mines. On that day John L. Lewis, at his own request, came to see Ickes.

Ickes secured from Lewis a 15-day truce and also agreed to help in the negotiations to bring the miners and mine operators together.

"But," added Ickes explicitly, "anything that is done must be okayed by the War Labor Board. They are in charge of this wage dispute."

Temperamental WLB

NEXT DAY the first bit of temperament flared forth. It came after John L. Lewis had told the press that the miners were negotiating "in cooperation" with Ickes. Immediately the War Labor Board hit the ceiling, ran to the White House, claimed that Ickes had usurped their jurisdiction and that the miners could not negotiate with Ickes.

To placate the War Labor Board Secretary Ickes called a press conference and made a public statement that he had nothing to do with wage negotiations, this being up to the board.

So the dispute dragged on. John L. Lewis, who hates Roosevelt, sat down with the Roosevelt-baiting mine operators. The operators had none of their top-notch men present, but were represented by second-string lawyers, who, when a proposal was made, had to go out of the room and phone their principals.

Spokesman for the Southern operators was ex-Senator Ed Burke of Nebraska, who opposed the President bitterly on almost everything while in the Senate, and has continued to oppose him since.

Finally, as the deadline of May 31 approached, Ickes, seeing a certain coal strike just a few hours off, called in both John L. Lewis and the coal operators. Ex-Senator Burke, of the Southern operators, did not show up. But Charles A. O'Neill, of the Northern operators, did.

Portal-to-Portal Argument

BY THIS TIME the miners had been given a guaranteed six-day week, some concessions on the upkeep of their tools, and were arguing about portal-to-portal pay. But nobody could agree how long the men were under ground, so they wouldn't determine portal-to-portal pay. Finally, Ickes proposed:

"None of you seem to know just what portal-to-portal means, so why not appoint a commission of three to decide it—one miner, one operator and one neutral? Then we can keep on mining coal and when portal-to-portal pay is decided, the miners can get the benefit of interim pay."

John L. Lewis accepted this in principle, but proposed the interim pay, until the final decision was made, should be $1.50 a day. O'Neill, however, proposed interim pay of 80 cents.

This was at about 6 p. m. Monday, May 31. Ickes had to leave for a radio broadcast, and came back at 8 p. m. to find the conference still deadlocked. O'Neill had raised the ante to $1 a day interim pay until final portal-to-portal pay was decided. But Lewis would not budge. He still stood out for $1.50.

It was at this point that negotiations broke down. The truce expired at midnight that night, and next day the miners were not at their pits.

Complaint to Roosevelt

NEXT DAY ALSO the War Labor Board heard about Ickes' last-minute intervention. Again they hit the ceiling. This time they sent a letter to the President threatening to resign if the Secretary of the Interior intervened again.

Meanwhile Ickes sent a letter to the President giving his views of the War Labor Board. Honest Harold, famous for his vituperation, poured more of it into that letter than almost any other he has written. He accused the WLB of being more interested in its own prestige than in preventing the most serious strike of the war.

It was at this point that the President last week called in all the members of the War Labor Board, plus Ickes, and Justice Byrnes, to thrash out the entire question. It was a seething session. Dean Wayne Morse, of the University of Oregon, public member of the board, got off some hot barbs at Ickes. Chairman Davis was more restrained.

Ickes, in reply, described the WLB's action as illegal and unconstitutional, especially when they had served notice on the operators and miners that they could not reach an agreement between themselves, but could only negotiate before the WLB.

The President sided with his Secretary of the Interior. But by this time the strike already was in progress. Roosevelt had been put in one of the most difficult holes of his long career by a labor union which he had helped more than any other President in history.

Zoo News

The monkeys have a victory garden at the Washington Zoo. Director William M. Mann is growing sweet potatoes to take the place of bananas in the monkeys' diet. Bananas are scarce, and sweet potatoes cost 20 cents a pound. So he grows them . . . Congress has been asked to increase the Zoo appropriation to meet increased food costs . . . There's some relief in the fact that OPA has placed a 12-cents-a-pound ceiling on horse meat for the lions . . . The mammals get 30 bushels of free vegetables every day when the Zoo truck makes the rounds of grocery stores to collect wilted lettuce and other vegetable trimmings otherwise thrown away . . . The Zoo has a special exhibit for visiting President Barclay of Liberia—a Liberian pigmy hippo, "Matilda," and her son, "Gumdrop," born on the day the Yanks invaded North Africa . . . "Heine," the black rhinoceros, is just recovering from a touch of pneumonia. Treatment was sulfa drugs and a nasal spray . . . Unique among Washington air raid shelters is the one in the basement of the lion house called Daniel's Den. It's for people, not the lions. But who would want to take refuge under lion cages while they are being bombed from above?

Federation Proposed for Balkan Problem To Settle Ancient Issues in Several States

By Kosta Todorov

Third of Series.

There are three possible solutions for the political quarrels which have given the Balkan nations their reputation as "the powder-keg of Europe."

1. The German solution. The Balkans can become a political, economic and military pendant to the German Mitteleuropa system. This solution is against the will and the interests of the Balkan peoples. It is possible only in case a German victory should perpetuate Germany's present domination of the Balkans.

2. The pro-Russian solution. The Bolshevization of all the Balkan states and their incorporation into the Soviet Union.

The first solution was popular in appeasement circles of western Europe before the war. The second is now very popular in many western political circles. But there is a third, the normal solution. This can be stated in two words:

3. Balkan Federation. This solution of the problem corresponds to the interests and desires of the Balkan peoples. It is at the same time the most democratic solution.

Federation Desired

Without going too far into the past, the idea of federation has been extremely popular among the Balkan peoples from the beginning of this century. All socialist and radical parties have included it in their programs. In Bulgaria the Peasant Party, founded in 1899, made it the basis of its program on foreign policy. And when its leader, Alexander Stamboliski, became Prime Minister in 1919, he proposed to all the Balkan states the immediate creation of such a federation.

That was in Paris during the Peace Conference in November, 1919. I was there as press representative of the Bulgarian delegation, and it was on me that Stamboliski called to help him draft the letters which carried the proposal to the several Balkan prime ministers. They did not reply; the rivalry and bitterness of war were perhaps still too fresh in their minds.

Leaders Lose Lives

Thereafter Stamboliski strove to bring about the union of Bulgaria and Yugoslavia as the first step toward federation of all the Balkan nations. As his minister to Belgrade, it became my mission to promote this effort, which was constantly impeded and finally thwarted by Italian ambitions in the Balkans. At the very moment when Yugoslavia was ready to accept alliance with Bulgaria, a Fascist coup d'etat organized and financed by Mussolini overthrew the Peasant government. Stamboliski was tortured to death by the Fascists, and the idea which had cost him his life was rejected by the new pro-Fascist government.

Ten years later King Alexander of Yugoslavia tried to organize a united Balkan front. He made every effort to bring Bulgaria in, and for a time it looked as if he might succeed. Whereupon he, too, was assassinated by Mussolini, this time with the connivance of Hitler, Horthy of Hungary, Boris of Bulgaria and Pierre Laval of France.

The common suffering of the Balkan peoples under German occupation has created a new feeling of solidarity among them. To be sure, some have suffered more than others. The Serbs, who have resisted most heroically, have also suffered most. According to the latest information, the number killed totals more than 700,000. Next come the Greeks, who after their magnificent fight against Italy, are now starving under dual occupation by Italy and Germany. The Croats, passive in the beginning, have begun to resist during the past year, and their resistance has been met by bloody repressions.

Germans Hated

Even in Bulgaria and Rumania the Germans have followed their traditional policy of robbing and mistreating their allies; a policy which has won them the same cordial hate as in the other Balkan countries.

All over the Balkans there is the same enemy, the same suffering, the same hate, and therefore the same feeling of solidarity among the peoples. These two years of German occupation have taught them more than the 50 previous years of independence. They have learned that independence is impossible so long as they remain separate states. They know now that if they had been united, as Stamboliski wanted them to be united, Germany could never have invaded the Balkans.

The United Nations can help their own cause and that of the Balkan peoples by taking advantage of this feeling of solidarity and offering the Balkans not only freedom from German domination but future security through federation. If they will support the Balkan peoples through their democratic parties and resolutely reject the "aid" of the different brands of totalitarian Balkan politicians, they will be rewarded by popular support of their invasion, regardless of the separatist attitude of cerain Balkan governments.

Such a policy will require some political orientation on their part, which I will discuss in my lext article.

—With Shirley Povich

We are not putting in the rap for Count Fleet because we believe he is a great race horse, but that final, incontrovertible proof still seems to be missing despite the five crowns he gathered in the Derby, the Preakness, the Belmont, the Withers and the Wood.

POVICH

In at least three of those races he could have shattered world records for the running time had he been pushed, we're willing to believe. In each case, the son of Reigh Count always won eased up. As yet he hasn't been fully extended. His full ability is still unknown.

Count Fleet has been winning with such all-fired style that it may be impolite to ask "Whom has he licked?" but that's the question they always fling into the face of a champion. Perhaps the question shouldn't even embarrass Count Fleet's handlers and fans, because the times in which he has been winning his races indicate that he could have licked the best.

The fact is, though, that Count Fleet hasn't licked much. The other day when he beat Fairy Manhurst and Desoronto he certainly wasn't beating much. No steed with even a trace of greatness has been in a race with Count Fleet as a 3-year-old. No horse of consequence has looked him in the eye and made the Count run hard to win it.

There are men of the turf who wouldn't give a nickel for a record achieved on running time alone. They'd rather see a horse of theirs beat a good field in slow time than a poor field in record time. That's where the test comes, in a thoroughbred's ability to meet a challenge from a good horse.

Everybody knows there have been stake races run in slower time than $2000 plater races on the same afternoon. That's when the running time can become quite meaningless. In England they set no store at all by the time of the race. For years, one of the American records was held by a horse named Hot Toddy, which wasn't much. When Count Fleet ran 3/5 of a second behind the world record for a mile and a half the other day, he failed to equal the record set by Handy Mandy in 1927. Handy Mandy was a mare that was something less than great, yet she held the record.

Before the advent of the electric timer, official times were always varied, anyway. Seldom did watches of the clockers agree. The official timer's report was accepted as a matter of course, but everybody knew that cold weather and body heat could affect the stop watches. The late Colonel James and his three sons used to sit in a box holding four watches on the running of the race, and take the average figure as their official time.

What we are getting around to, in a round-about sort of way, is that Count Fleet may be coming up to the test that could assure his greatness beyond all dispute. Out in Chicago, the Washington Park track has invited the owners of Count Fleet, Alsab and Whirlaway to meet in a three-horse charity race in August. That could be the race of the century, with all three horses Chicago-owned.

Alsab's trainer, Sarge Swenke, has already expressed his willingness to toss his colt in against Count Fleet and Whirlaway. "Alsab never hid from any horse," the picturesque Swenke told our friend, Dave Walsh, of the International News Service. Swenke was slyly recalling last summer when Whirlaway's owner shipped that horse East at a time when Alsab moved to the Chicago racing scene.

The glory that would come to Count Fleet if he beat that pair, Alsab and Whirlaway, would be unbounded. He would be meeting in Alsab a horse that never lets the opposition get very far in front, and in Whirlaway he would be threatened with the horse owning the greatest come-from-behind rush in turf history. Count Fleet would have to run not only his best race, but his smartest and his most courageous.

They'd give Count Fleet a weight advantage in that race, of course. As a 3-year-old he would carry only 117 pounds at a mile and a quarter in August, a 9-pound concession from both the 4-year-old Alsab and the 5-year-old Whirlaway. There could be no complaint about those weights. They are standard and fixed after years of analysis of weight-for-age events.

Just how Count Fleet would fare against Whirlaway and Alsab we don't know. Of the courage of the latter pair, there is no doubt. There's no temptation, either, to doubt the running heart of Count Fleet, but this time he'd be in against horses that are champions in their own right, and the winner could be the greatest thoroughbred of our time.

Dodgers Beat Pirates, In Virtual Tie

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, June 7—Brooklyn's Dodgers clustered four hits for four runs in the eighth inning tonight, winding up their none too successful Western tour with a 4 to 1 victory over Pittsburgh before 19,162 fans. The triumph put the Dodgers into a virtual tie with St. Louis for the league leadership, although trailing in percentage points.

It was another personal triumph for fat Freddy Fitzsimmons over the Pirates, who had beaten him for the first time in three years earlier this season.

Big Fitz allowed seven hits, four of them by Frankie Gustine, who opened the Buccaneers first inning with a triple and counted on a passed ball.

Southpaw Wally Hebert, aided by a couple of double plays, held the bums in check until the eighth, when Arky Vaughan singled, went to third on Dixie Walker's one-base smash and counted on Dolph Camilli's out to Elbie Fletcher. After Billy Herman was walked on purpose, Augie Galan singled and Bob Bragan doubled to complete the rally.

The game ended one of Pittsburgh's most successful home stays, during which the Pirates won 12 and lost four and grabbed third place in the league's standing.

Haegg Says He Will Quit After Tour

By the Associated Press

New York, June 7.—Gunder Haegg will retire from running after he completes his American tour, probably in September, and settle down to being a good fireman in Gaevle.

The swift Swede, holder of seven world track records, made this surprise announcement today as he made plans to match speed and stamina with America's best in a series of races throughout the United States. His first start will be in either the 1500 or 5000 meters at the National A. A. U. championships, June 19-20.

"I'm getting too old," he explained as he loafed in a midtown hotel while his advisers looked for a suitable place away from the city for him to train. "Running takes too much time. I have my job, and I'd rather be a good fireman than a champion runner. Running is just a hobby for me."

As the result of conferences today arrangements were made for Haegg to train at Dartmouth and he was to leave at midnight tonight for the Hanover, N. H., school accompanied by Axel Nordquist, an adviser, and Sigurd Steinwall, a masseur.

Haegg said he was 24 and "past my peak." He said he was a little afraid of the ondition he can obtain in this country but that he wanted to meet America's foremost runners before he retired.

The 6-foot, gaunt, hollow-cheeked blonde runner is extremely interested in meeting Greg Rice, America's crack distance runner. Told that Rice is 27 years old and had no intention of retiring unless his maritime war work interferes, Haegg flashed a wide smile and shook his head as if he didn't believe it.

"I've been told that all your American runners stopped running in their early twenties. I don't think they are much good after they leave college."

Pep, Bartolo Meet for Title

Boston, June 7—Ignoring the disapproval of his throne-makers, Willie Pep, Hartford's able holder of the New York version of the featherweight boxing championship, will make his initial defense of that disputed title in a 15-round bout against Boston's Sal Bartolo tomorrow night at Braves Field.

This bout, the first such lavish outdoor promotion Boston has staged in many years, has the blessings of the Massachusetts Boxing Commission. Pep, however, was awarded his title by the New York commission and those fistic fathers have ruled that he can defend that title only under their jurisdiction.

Hart Stops Villar in First Round

By Al Costello

Post Staff Writer

An Al Hart that 4503 fans did not recognize came out of his corner last night at Griffith Stadium with a new-found aggressiveness and in 2:50 of the first round put away Claudio Villar, Spanish heavyweight, with surprising neatness and dispatch.

Villar, who was supposed to be a slugger, was the one who got slugged by the 227½-pound Army War College Negro soldier who was annexing his twentieth victory in his last 22 starts. Villar came in at 188½, just 39 pounds lighter than Hart.

Five times Villar hit the canvas as Hart, throwing a mixture of rights and lefts, was finding his mark with ridiculous ease. As long as it took the usually counter-punching Hart to shoot across the ring at the opening bell and throw a left hook, that was all the time Hart needed to drop Claudio for the first time—not more than three seconds after the fight started. Claudio took eight and was up, groggy, and very much surprised.

Down for Count of 6

Down Hart sent him again, this time for six with a murderous right that he brought down on the crouched Spaniard like a man chopping wood. Another left and Villar was down for five. Then a hard right to the midsection and Villar was taking another count, this time for seven. Finally, with a barrage that never ceased, Hart threw rights and lefts until Villar dropped the fifth time. At 10 he was still on one knee, a fraction of a second too late.

Villar has yet to hit Hart with anything more than a light left. He did throw one right, which missed. Hart, who only recently won disputed decisions over Lou Brooks and Wally Cross and was given a draw with Larry Lane, showed he could take the offensive and could punch and was not strictly the counterpuncher he is supposed to be.

Hart was a pretty tough baby last night. It was his best showing here by far. The 4503 fans paid $5585 into Promoter Joe Turner's till.

Jackie Wilson, 129, Pittsburgh, twice former N. B. A. featherweight, outpointed Jimmy Phillips, 130, of Baltimore, in the 10-round secondary feature. It was a good scrap.

Wilson Uses Hook

Wilson was using a nice left hook, something he did not unveil a couple of weeks ago when he relied almost solely on a right hand to TKO Danny Petro. He soon realized Phillips lacked a punch and was fearless in trading punches with the Marylander.

From the third round all the way through to the tenth Phillips was handicapped with a cut left eye. Three times they wrestled each other to the floor and once Wilson nearly took a head first plunge from the ring into the laps of the front row seat holders when he missed a vicious, wild right-hand swing.

The decision was unanimous, although Phillips lost no friends by his excellent showing.

Billy Bates, 130, Pittsburgh, stablemate of Jackie Wilson's, punched his way to an eight-round decision over Paullie Jackson, 129, Uniontown, in the main preliminary. Jackson suffered a cut eye in the second round but it was not serious. A clean-cut advantage in the last two rounds won for Bates.

Eddie Kane, 145½, former Washingtonian now in the Coast Guard, scored his second straight victory, sinking a left hook into Kid Fuzzy's tummy in 0:34 seconds of the third round to win by a kayo. Otis Harris, 193, Washington, outpointed Jimmy Irvin of North Carolina, in the opening four.

Nats Prove Surprise Team Among Leaders

Griffith Elated as Vernon, Johnson and Spence Start Pounding Ball to Stay Close to Yanks

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

At this point the Nats are the surprise team in the American League race. In second place, only a game removed from the league-leading Yankees, the Washington athletes are commanding a new-found respect around the league generally.

And the picture has begun to brighten for the Nats. All of a sudden such as Mickey Vernon, Bob Johnson and Stan Spence have begun to pound the ball, relieving the club's pitching of what had been a tremendous burden.

Clark Griffith, elated at the resurgence of the club's hitting power, is even more pleased by the team's conduct generally. "I like their bounce," said the 72-year-old club owner. "They showed me what I like to see in a ball team when they won three straight from the Tigers after losing the first two games of the series."

The Nats have stayed within hailing distance of the Yankees by beating off their most threatening challengers. Just before beating back the Tigers after the Detroit club had poked its collective nose into second place, the Nats slapped down Cleveland in four out of five games to take over that team's second-place berth.

Today the Nats move on to Boston for a five-game series starting

Heckling Expected By Griffith, Altrock At Club Luncheon

Some of the friendly heckling which always marks their appearances in public will be featured by Clark Griffith, Washington Baseball Club president, and Nick Altrock, veteran comedian-coach, when they jointly address Touchdown Club members this afternoon at 12:30 o'clock.

Griffith last night said he will be prepared to expose Altrock, formerly one of baseball's greatest pitchers, as a left-hander, both on and off the playing field.

Jimmy Conzelman, former Chicago Cardinal grid coach who recently joined the St. Louis Browns' public relations staff, also will be a guest speaker. Conzelman is a gifted speaker and yarn spinner.

Police Quell Battles in 11-5 Game

Scattered fist fights which involved more than 50 spectators and threatened to force a cancellation of the Interhigh baseball playoffs marked Eastern's 11-to-5 victory over Wilson High yesterday on the loser's field.

During a lull in the ball game in the third inning two overexcited rooters squared off and before police from the Eighth Precinct and faculty members of the rival schools restored order several fights were in progress throughout the stands.

The last time Eastern and Wilson met, the players were involved in a scrap starting from words between Jack Ogle of the Wilson team and Edsel Martz of Eastern. Spectators took up the fighting in the stands, but this time no players were involved, as all remained a comfortable distance from the fisticuffs.

One of the more ardent battlers will be held for Juvenile Court, according to arresting officers from the Eighth Precinct.

After order had been restored it was announced over the public address system that the playoff series between Eastern and Wilson to decide the city scholastic diamond championship would be cancelled at the next sign of a disturbance. Peace and quiet reigned

That's why Imperial is "velveted"

This "Velveting" works wonders in smoothness—gives IMPERIAL that distinctive, easy-to-take goodness which is making millions say "wonderful!" And—a goodness that has made IMPERIAL one of America's most-wanted whiskies.

But like sugar and coffee, IMPERIAL is on quota—because our stills are now making war alcohol instead of whiskey.

And sometimes delivery is held up a day or so, because shipments of war materials and food naturally come first. So if your store or tavern sometimes cannot supply you with IMPERIAL, please be patient and remember there is a mighty good reason for it.

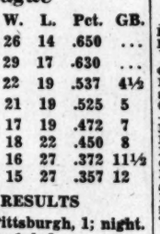
On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 7.—"Foul!" some bum yelled at Belmont Saturday when Count Fleet charged over the finish line a sixteenth of a mile in front of Fairy Manhurst in the $50,000 Belmont Stakes.



CONSIDINE

It was a new high in protests. Or a new low.

Fairy Manhurst and Desoronodo were so far behind — and had been from the start—that they appeared to be fighting for the lead to the next race.

We ran into Earl Sande after the race and the former jockey said that the Count was "great." That's the highest praise obtainable from a real turfman. "Great" is a loose adjective, but not among the likes of Sande. Men like that use it only in reference to three or four horses in racing history.

"I can't compare him to any horse I ever saw or rode," said Sande—who rode Exterminator, Man o' War and Gallant Fox, and won the Kentucky Derby on Zev and the Fox as well as on Flying Ebony. "He doesn't run like any horse I ever saw. He's all by himself."

Carl Hubbell's 250th major league victory, achieved Saturday in his third start of the 1943 season, delighted millions who root for the lanky veteran and who wish him continued success.

He has now won 35 more games than any other pitcher in action, the nearest being his one-time teammate Fred Fitzsimmons. Hub will be 40 this month, so there is no chance that he'll ever join the slim list of men who have won 300 or more games—Cy Young (511), Walter Johnson (414), Grover Cleveland Alexander (373), Christy Mathewson (372), Charles Nichols (360), Jim Galvin (355), Tim Keefe (342), John Clarkson (328), Eddie Plank (324), Hoss Radbourne (310), Mike Welch (309), Tony Mullane 302 and Lefty Grove (300).

But there isn't any question that, in a baseball era when only the lively ball was used and when no shenangians were permitted, Hubbell's record is remarkable. If any of the old-time greats could be rejuvenated to pitch against Hubbell, we'd hate to have a lot of money bet against Carl. Here are some of the milestones he dug en route to the 250 mark:

Pitched 43 consecutive shutout innings in 1933; won 16 straight in 1936, achieving the sixteenth on the last day of the season. Then he won eight straight at the beginning of next season. Pitched a no-hitter against Pittsburgh in 1929; led the National League in earned run average in 1933 (1.66), 1934 and 1936; in games won in 1933, 1936 and 1937; in won and lost average in 1936 and 1937; beat the Cards 1-0 in 18 innings in 1933, without walking a man; struck out Ruth, Gehrig, Foxx, Simmons and Cronin in succession in the 1934 all-star game; struck out the first three batters to face him in his first World Series (1933) and won both of his games in that series allowing no earned runs.

Jockey Kirk Boots Four Winners Home at Charles Town

Takes First Three Races And Feature

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Charles Town, W. Va., June 7.—Jockey Carson Kirk, of the Silver Spring (Md.) Kirks, turned in a banner afternoon in the saddle, riding four winners on the eight race program, three in a row. Kirk piloted the first three winners of the day and then came back to take the sixth, the day's best offering, aboard A. A. Fishback's Seven Seas. The youngster overcame early interference to bring the 4-year-old daughter of Hard Tack to the wire a head in front of William F. Hitt's Copperett. Third money in the group of six going 6½ furlongs went to the East View Stable's Hard Loser.

As was the case in all the Kirk victories, the winner paid good prices, and Seven Seas returned $9.20 for the usual deuce. The filly was clocked in 1:21 over the fast track. The program today was the first of six this week with the National War Fund taking the profits. The attendance was small but the betting was brisk.

Seven Seas had trouble directly after the break of the feature and was slightly bothered at the first turn. However, Kirk brought the filly to serious contention on the back stretch. She finally caught the front-running Copperette and, in the final drive, was up for the photo decision.

Kirk made the daily double a personal proposition and scattered backers of the "6 and 2" combination collected a $200 mutuel. Kirk rode D. H. Tabler's Chat Hopkins home 3½ lengths in advance of the closest rival, and the 3-year-old paid $9.60.

In the second race, Kirk was on Mighty Busy, owned by J. M. Trapnell, jr., and he drove the 7-year-old mare to a head verdict over Charles Stalling's Singing Steel. Mighty Busy paid $35 in her own right.

Kirk's third straight success was with Leach and Charnley's Pacifier in the third event. The Chance Shot gelding scored by a length and a half and paid $19.20.

The program cost two jockeys $25 fines. Stanley Austin was charged by the stewards for crowding in the first race and Patsy Grant took his rap for cutting over too sharply with Grey Flash in the fifth event.

For the first four months of the company's fiscal year, through May 30, the company's sales totaled $264,267,874, down 6.4 per cent from $282,365,839 in the same period of 1942.

Steel Output Dip Laid to Mine Strike

New York, June 7 (AP).—The American Iron & Steel Institute today estimated steel output for this week would be 1,688,400 tons with mills averaging 97.5 per cent of capacity. This would compare with 98.4 per cent and 1,704,000 tons last week.

Steel trade sources said the decline in the tonnage was due partly to last week's walkout of soft coal miners.

A month ago steel operations were 99.4 per cent and output $721,300 tons and a year ago 99.3 per cent and 1,686,700 tons on a smaller capacity.

Grocers Reap 1% Profit on Sales in 1942

Is your local chain grocer or the corner food shop growing fat on high wartime prices while you sweat to pay the bill?

Not by a long shot, according to a study of grocers' profits over recent years in connection with Government proposals to "roll back" retail prices. The survey finds profits declining steadily, and more rapidly since rationing has cut the average customer's purchases.

The National City Bank of New York in its survey declares:

"In addition to the many difficult operating problems faced by the Nation's food stores, the falling volume of sales and continued advance of costs put a further squeeze on their narrow margins."

The bank's compilation of the profits of leading chain stores—12 big chains were used for most of the calculations—indicates that in 1933 they retained 2.4 cents out of every dollar spent by their customers, after paying their expenses and their taxes, and that the general trend has been downward in spite of the last ten years, reaching 1 cent on each dollar of sales in 1942.

Figures for all retail food stores are not so readily available nor so recent, but the more than 6000 such corporations which reported to the Treasury in 1940 earned an even 1 cent on each dollar of sales in that year.

A reaction to the grocer's problems comes directly from a food-trade source, the weekly digest of the American Institute of Food Distribution:

"The problem confronting each retailer now is deciding whether he will operate with little or no profits or continue to make good money by playing fast and loose with Office of Price Administration regulations."

Business Briefs Of D. C. Interest

Chain Store Sales Drop

The Commerce Department estimated yesterday that chain store and mail order sales in April totaled $1,191,892,000, an increase of 8 per cent over March.

With the exception of drug stores, April sales were below seasonal expectations for most of the trades reporting, the Department said.

"Grocery store sales, which have been tapering off in recent months, were substantially lower than in March," the report said.

"This was largely a reflection of the effect of the rationing program, which became effective at the end of March, together with a curtailed supply of a sufficiently diversified variety of foodstuffs to meet consumer demand."

April Dividends Off 7 Per Cent

American corporations paid out $292,000,000 in cash dividends in April, 7 per cent less than they disbursed in the corresponding month last year, the Commerce Department reported today.

Although the percentage reductions were largest in the mining and heat, light and power industries, the department said, the greatest dollar decrease occurred in manufacturing where dividend payments dropped from $136,000,000 in April 1942 to $125,000,000 in April of this year.

Railroad dividend payments, amounting to $17,000,000, were 36 per cent higher than in the same month last year.

Lanston Nets $2.32 a Share

The Lanston Monotype Machine Co., whose stock is listed on the Washington Stock Exchange, yesterday issued its pamphlet report for the fiscal year ended February 28 showing net income of $218,239. This was equal to $2.32 a share on common stock, which is on a $2 annual dividend basis.

President Harvey D. Best said that stockholders' approval is being sought for a proposal to reduce par value of stock from $100 to $25 a share and a corresponding reduction in capital.

Va. League to Hear James

James, a former president of the national association and of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League is vice chairman of the legislative committee of the parent group.

The securities represent the unsubscribed part of a new issue of 35 million dollars offered recently to holders of Armour 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock, whose rights to subscribe expired June 3.

Net proceeds from the sale will be used to retire the 35 million dollars of outstanding 7 per cent preferred.

Associated with Kuhn, Loeb & Co. were 89 firms throughout the country.

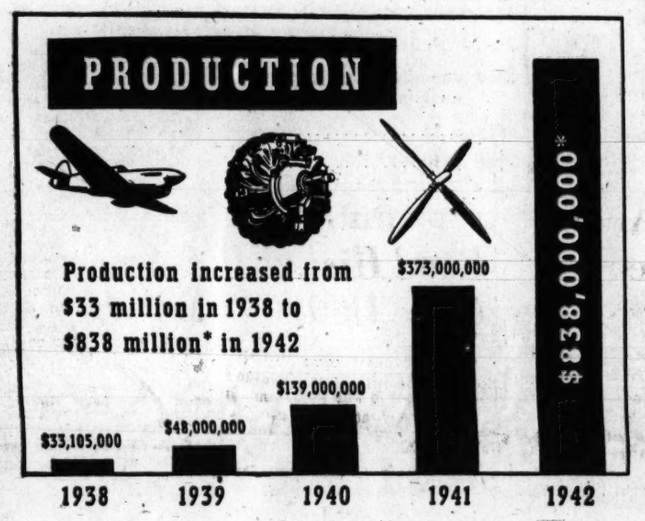
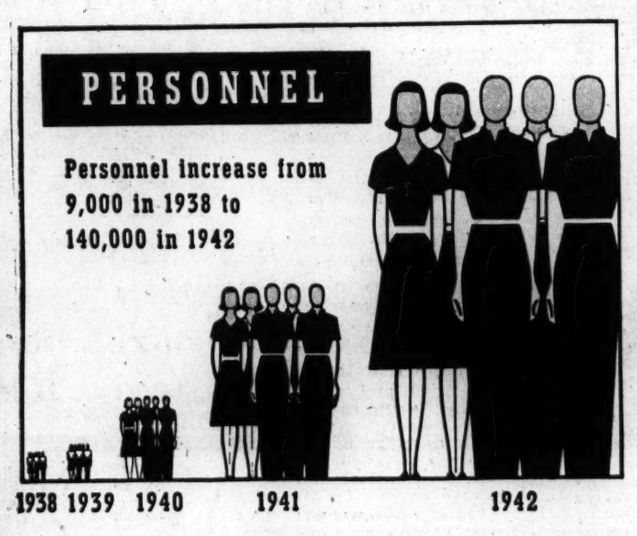
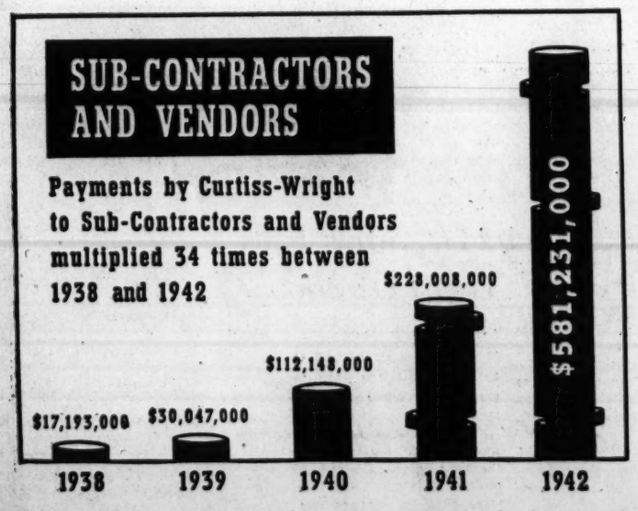
A Report to the American People







THIS REPORT FROM CURTISS-WRIGHT is addressed to everyone in America . . . to all who are fighting this war through work and sacrifice and service in our Armed Forces . . . and to all who are financing this war through taxes and by the purchase of War Bonds.

We are making this report to you because we believe that it is important and right that you know how we, as a major producer in the aviation industry, are doing our share of the job.

It is important and right that you learn how tens of thousands of skilled men and women of Curtiss-Wright are keeping faith with our fighting men.

"Few people outside the industry are aware that into a Wright Cyclone engine go as many as 80,000 manufacturing operations calling for 55,000 individual inspections . . . some to accuracies as fine as four-millionths of an inch."

In the Spring of 1940, shortly before the fall of France, the President of the United States called for the production of 50,000 warplanes. It was a startling challenge to the nation's productive capacity.

The aviation industry well realized the full import of this challenge. From long experience, we knew the size of the job ahead.

Few people outside the industry for instance, are aware that into a single 1700 H.P. Wright Cyclone engine go as many as 80,000 manufacturing operations calling for 55,000 individual inspections . . . some to accuracies as fine as four-millionths of an inch.

Not many people realize that into the airframe alone of a single Curtiss P-40 Warhawk go 20,440 parts and more than 100,000 rivets, clamps, and bolts.

"And the Curtiss Electric Propeller of a modern airplane is a fine piece of machinery, much more intricate and difficult to manufacture than the automobile you drive!"

And the Curtiss Electric Propeller of a modern airplane is a fine piece of machinery, much more intricate and difficult to manufacture than the automobile you drive.

Yet overnight these things were being called for in tens of thousands within a year.

Yes, we knew the meaning of the job that lay ahead, and frankly, there were many who wondered if it were humanly possible. But, needless to say, the job has been and is being done.

Through team-work and cooperation between management, labor, the Army, the Navy and the War Production Board . . . cooperation such as this country has never seen before . . . nearly 7,000 planes each month are currently rolling off American assembly lines.

And to help attain the President's goal of 185,000 warplanes in two years, we of the aviation industry will give unsparingly of our time, our exacting aeronautical "know how," even our most cherished patents to help the automotive industry and other manufacturers get into mass production in a minimum space of time.

We of Curtiss-Wright have had a large part to play in this huge undertaking. Overnight ground was broken for millions of feet of additional floor space. Our personnel has grown from a few thousand employees before the war to a current number greater than the entire population of Albany, N. Y., or Salt Lake City . . . and a single plant devoted to production of fighter planes and cargo transports employs more workers today than were in the entire aviation industry before the start of World War II.

Today the men and women at the 16 plants of Curtiss-Wright are turning out airplanes, engines, and propellers at a rate of more than 25 times our 1938 production, before the start of World War II.

Helping us to do this job is a vast army of workers employed by thousands of sub-contractors and vendors located in nearly all of the 48 states. The payments in dollars made by Curtiss-Wright to these sub-contractors and vendors rose from $17,193,000 in 1938 to more than $580,000,000 in 1942.

This then, is how management and employees of the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, working together as a team are keeping faith with our fighting men. It is part of the story of an industry that is performing seemingly impossible tasks. It is recognition that the skills and resourcefulness of American craftsmen working in an atmosphere of freedom, can provide the tools with which to remake the world.

What has been accomplished gives us definite assurance of what can and will be done . . . The promise that American aviation holds for a better life, in the new age of the air that will follow this war, is the greatest of any industrial development within our time.

Our job has only begun . . . LOOK TO THE SKY, AMERICA!

G. W. Vaughan

Pleasure Driving?

Boston, June 7 (I.N.S.)—The Boston OPA office today had this complaint before it:

A motorist wants to know why he can't obtain more gasoline coupons when two of his wife's suitors are able to take her out on their "C" rations.

Oily Bird Hikes Way

Fort George G. Meade, Md., June 7 (A.P.).—Clarence, the carrier pigeon, had the sympathy today of a number of recruits at this army post.

Clarence got his message through but it entailed a 10-mile hike from Odenton, Md., where he had been released. His wing feathers were so coated with oil that he was unable to fly.

D. C. Police And Firemen Face Draft

Ruling by WMC Puts One-Year Men of Capital Services on Call

Members of the Washington Police and Fire Departments having only a year's service or less face induction into military service under a ruling by the War Manpower Commission, the District Commissioners were advised yesterday. The men are excluded from the list of District government employes holding "key positions."

There are 291 rookie policemen and 129 firemen who have been in service short of a year and therefore may be drafted. The Commissioners had asked that members of the Police and Fire Departments be given occupational deferments.

Special guards of elderly or physically inferior men will be sought to replace the rookie policemen, but the firemen cannot be replaced by men of lower physical standards, the Commissioners said.

Of the list of 1306 District employes in departments other than the fire and police, the WMC approved 738 and disapproved 568. There are approximately 16,000 employes of the municipal government.

This does not necessarily mean that the number of persons stated will leave the local service, since the list was based on positions, not on persons. Many of the persons occupying the disapproved "key positions" are women or over-age men, whom the draft would not affect.

The potential loss to the Police and Fire Departments is regarded as extremely serious by District officials. For many months the Police Department has been acknowledged inadequate for the protection of the boom-time National Capital. Although appropriations have been obtained for the employment of more officers, the Civil Service eligibility lists have not produced enough qualified applicants to fill the demand.

Furthermore, it was pointed out at the District Building, the physical requirements of the Police and Fire Departments are approximately those of the military services, so the draft chances of rookie police and firemen are on the positive side.

The Commissioners have asked Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech to prepare legislation to enable them to recruit the special guard which would not be regular police, and whose duties would be restricted.

Federal Diary 'bsent for Day

Legislation Proposes OPA Curb

Justice Bill Changes Would Impose Limits On Prosecutions

A congressional blow at OPA was aimed at that organization—and at WPB too—yesterday in an amendment to the Department of Justice appropriations bill, offered by Senator James E. Murray (Democrat) of Montana.

The amendment would prohibit ust of department funds for prosecutions of alleged violations where any of three far-reaching provisions had not been met.

One provision would prohibit department prosecution where the accused could prove that the regulations did not allow him a fair margin of profit.

Another would prohibit prosecution when the defendant could prove that he was prevented from getting his normal supply of the commodity he handled by reason of governmental regulations.

The third would bar prosecution if it could be shown the contested regulation was promulgated without the advice of an industry committee.

The amendment was sponsored by the National Association of Non-Slaughtering Meat Processors and Wholesalers and the National Independent Poultry Council, for which Frank Buckley and Joseph B. Danzansky of Washington are general counsel.

Danzansky said yesterday that Senators would receive telegrams from all over the country urging adoption of the amendment.

He added he was assured a strong effort would be made to obtain passage of the amendment by the House.

The result of the enactment of the amendment would be that a person accused of violating any of the OPA regulations would be allowed immediately to state his case in any Federal Court, instead of going through the lengthy procedure now required, which often means a delay of a year or more, Danzansky explained.

In a statement, Buckley and Danzansky said the present regulations, for the meat industry for instance, were resulting in driving the processors out of business or to the black market.

The major effect will be to require the OPA to consider the full effects of regulations before issuing them, it was declared.

The amendment also would curtail the powers of the War Production Board, in that its rulings would be subject to the same law, it was stated.

Kindler Deplores Laxity Here In Backing Music Enterprises

Symphony Leader Compares Interest On Pacific Coast

Dr. Hans Kindler, who has given the Nation's Capital its own symphony orchestra, yesterday came back from a country-wide recruiting tour and told reporters that music appreciation and sponsorship in Washington are far behind the keen interest he has found on the West Coast, "which bristles with musical talent."

"Due to the peculiar position of Washington," Dr. Kindler said, "in which the citizenry has no voice in directing its own affairs, no money has been made available from public sources for musical enterprise.

"For some reason, Washington's musical endeavors also have lacked the support of wealthy citizens who have built symphony orchestras in other American cities."

Dr. Kindler's search for talent for his National Symphony Orchestra, the ranks of which have been depleted by the war, was successful, he said.

"We could learn a lesson from the Western ways of supporting musical enterprise," he went on, citing a San Francisco statute through which one-half of 1 per cent of the money involved in any real estate deal is taken as tax for support of the city's symphony orchestra.

"Here in Washington," Dr. Kindler added, "we have had to struggle along without any support from the local Government, except for the splendid cooperation we always have had from the park commissioners; and if we have succeeded in carrying the orchestra to its present height and will be able to present a finer program during this summer's season than ever before, it is a near-miracle."

HANS KINDLER

Dr. Kindler will conduct the gala opening of this year's Sunset Symphonies at the Water Gate next Sunday. Other concerts, with famous soloists participating, will be held every Wednesday, Friday and Sunday through July 21.

The orchestra, consisting of 72 members, will contain about 10 women players, a decided increase over last year. There will be well over a dozen women in the orchestra during the winter season, when the personnel will be raised to 90.

D.C. Day Care Centers Open This Month

Arrangements Made for Children Of School Age And Younger

Washington's first day care centers for the children of working mothers will open in four public schools sometime this month, timed approximately with the closing of schools for vacation, Dorothy Pearse, director of the child care program, announced yesterday.

At the same time, a check for $34,340 of Lanham Act funds was presented by Mrs. Izetta Miller, FWA regional director of war services, to Commissioner Guy Mason to cover about 40 per cent of the $77,000 FWA-Lanham Act grant for maintenance and operation of 20 day care centers in the District project. Of these 10 will be for school age and 10 for preschool age children.

Applications are still being accepted for admission to the school centers, which will be open 10 or 12 hours every day except Sunday. They will be located as follows:

Nursery schools (for 30 2-to-5-year olds), Truesdale School, Ninth and Ingraham Streets Northwest; Harrison School (Negro), Thirteenth and V Streets Northwest; child care center (for 50 over 5 years old); H. V. Cooke School, Seventeenth and Euclid Streets Northwest. A center for both age groups will be established at the Smothers School (Negro), Forty-fourth Street and Washington Place Northeast.

While 50 per cent of the operation costs will be covered by Lanham funds, parents will be asked to pay as much as they are able of the $1 per day estimated as the average cost per child.

Meanwhile renovation of the child care and health center to be located at 300 D Street Southeast, originally scheduled as the first project of the program, is being held up as day care officials await receipt of $24,000 requested for reconstruction. Fourteen thousand and seven hundred dollars of this amount has been allotted by the FWA, but officials cannot open bidding on contracts until assured of the exact amount in Lanham funds to be made available.

Tentative date given for the opening of this center is August 15. It will be designed to care for 80 children between the ages of 2 and 5, and 30 youngsters over that age.

No plans have been made as yet to care for children under 2 years, however, since Lanham funds have been designated for schools for children above that age only. Underway are plans for a survey to determine whether registered and approved homes would be feasible for day care purposes for this age group.

New $700,000 YMCA Annex Dedicated

The new $700,000 annex of the Central Y. M. C. A. was presented to the organization at a reunion dinner of the Old-Timers last night at the "Y" Building. Charles E. Krey, chairman of the building committee, accepted the new building from the contractor, Charles H. Tompkins.

Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, congratulated the "Y" for its contribution to the growth and spirit of the National Capital. He also warned them:

"Bickering among high Government officials, overlapping functions of Federal agencies, and strife in industry, are injuring America's war effort. Every extravagance in our personal lives, every unnecessary expense in government, prolongs this terrible conflict. Our gallant forces on the fighting fronts have a right to expect this home front disunity to cease."

Certificates of achievement were given to the Old Timers of the "Y." Recipients of the awards were: Edwin C. Graham, president of the Hamilton National Bank; George A. Lewis, president of the Lewis Advertising Agency; Houston Thompson, attorney; Hugh A. Thrift, contract builder, and William Montgomery, president of the Acacia Life Insurance Co.

Eugene E. Barnett of New York, general secretary of the international committee of the Y. M. C. A., traced the growth of the "Y" from its begnning of 12 members in 1844 to the organization of 1300 units in this country and more than 10,000 throughout the world. He also described the method used to spread the benefits of the "Y" to prisoners of war.

Fathers' Contest

This Father Read His Bible Daily

And still they come—nominations for the title of Washington's "ideal father" in The Post's annual quest in celebration of Father's Day June 20.

One letter failed to identiy Dad by name or occupation but said:

"I wonder if your poppy raised you according to the Bible? Twice a day we prayed, twice a day our poppy read the Bible. Nothing could interfere; our days had to start and end with prayers.

"As children it was a weary routine and many were the antics cut while poppy had his eyes closed. But in the days of stress and strain, the words that one heard so often in childhood, come back to give reassurance and comfort.

"When our mother reported us at night for our evil doings, Poppy looked up from the newspaper he was reading and with hardly a change of expression would say: 'The wicked ass on and are punished.' It made no difference what we did—whether the report card did not meet parental expectations, whether we stripped the neighbor's peach tree of fruit or whether it was a family fight or neighborhood feud—the answer was the same. If we kept on, however, we were punished.

"Never has there been a time when Poppy was too busy to help mother with various household chores nor too tired to hear our side of the story or show us by working with us how a job should be well done."

Letters should be addressed to Father's Day Editor, The Washington Post, and should be postmarked no later than June 15. That gives you just one week to tell the world that yours is the top pop of the Washington area—so get those descriptions in early!

Group to Plan Free Tickets For Concerts

Members of the Federal Recreation Committee will confer today on plans for distribution of 200 free tickets to Government workers for each of the 16 Starlight Concerts to be sponsored this summer by The Washington Post at Meridian Hill Park.

Although details of distribution will not be disclosed until later this week, it has already been decided that tickets will be awarded on the basis of merit and musical appreciation. Tickets will also be offered to the general public at popular prices.

Employes to Benefit

Forgetting the cares of their wartime desk duties, employes of various Federal agencies will enjoy without charge musical programs that have delighted thousands in the past. The peaceful park, where roses line the walks and waters of the lagoon ripple under soft lights, will provide an appropriate setting for the music and a haven from the bustle of Washington crowds.

At the opening concert on June 26, special guests will be the Government Girl Guard of Honor—100 girls who led the recent dedication of two Government Girl planes bought by Federal employes for the Army and Navy. Each girl will receive an extra ticket for her escort.

Albert Spalding, world-famed violinist, will be first in a succession of excellent musicians performing at the concerts. Others scheduled to appear are Salzedo Harp Ensemble, headed by Carlo Salzedo, who has been described as "the greatest harpist in America"; American Ballad Singers who will tell American history in song; Conrad Thibault, famed radio and concert baritone; the Trapp Family Singers: the Siberian Singers, and Lotte Goslar, incomparable comic mime.

Cappel Is Manager

The series has been made possible through the cooperation of the National Capital Parks Service and is under the management of C. C. Cappel.

Requests for reserved season tickets may be mailed now to The Post-Starlight Concerts, in care of The Washington Post, 1337 E Street, and they will be filed in the order in which they are received. Prices for each series of concerts—eight on Saturday evenings beginning on June 26 and eight on Sunday evenings beginning June 27—are $4.40, $8.80 and $13.20, including tax.

City to Seize Dogs Running Unmuzzled

Four more persons, including three children, were bitten by dogs in the District yesteday as authorities took steps to curb a possible rabies epidemic here.

Those bitten were: May Bates, 7, of 3219 Volta Place Northwest; Gay Abney, 7, of 116 Sixteenth Street Southwest; John J. Cox, 6, of 600 Gordon Place Northeast, and Thomas Vance, 39, of Fairmont Heights, Md.

The District Commissioners yesterday ruled that all dogs found on the streets not muzzled or on leash will be picked up by the poundmaster and destroyed.

Although the muzzling law does not provide that dogs should be both muzzled and leashed—as Health Officer George C. Ruhland had advocated as a means of general quarantine—the Commissioners have instructed Poundmaster Frank B. Marks to enforce the requirements for one or the other, to get owners to keep their dogs either at home or on leash.

To effect this, the Commissioners have promised the poundmaster the augmented force he thinks necessary to pursue this campaign. Marks said yesterday that he would need at least two more men and one more truck to make the rounds of the streets.

Meanwhile the Health Department reported that the seventh possible victim of a mad dog who bit "at least seven persons and nearly all the dogs" in the 400 block of K Street Northwest last Monday had not yet been located. Four of the persons were immediately identified, and urgent radio and newspaper appeal brought in two more, but the last identified person that may have been bitten has not communicated with the Health Department.

Apprehensive that the District's first general rabies epidemic in 10 years might have been started by the K Street dog and another that bit a child in the 2400 block of Virginia Avenue Northwest a few days earlier, the Commissioners said: "All persons owning dogs and who take them for airings or exercise on a leash, are admonished to keep them on a leash or they will be picked up and destroyed."

58 Students Graduated At Madeira

In a lovely, tree-framed natural amphitheater, 58 graduates of the Madeira School—22 of them from the Washington area — received their diplomas in commencement exercises on the school campus at Greenway, Va., yesterday.

Lieut. Comdr. Mildred H. McAfee, director of the WAVES, who addressed the graduating class and 300 guests, pointed out three fundamentals which, she said, should be carried over from life as undergraduates to the outside world.

"The first is adaptability, which is put to a very severe test in these days of rapid adjustments," Commander McAfee declared. "You should emerge from Madeira with a set of values that make you adaptable because you are so substantial that you can make a contribution to any situation in which you find yourself.

"The second is reliability—complete reliability and integrity in time of crisis and in your everyday life. And the third is a part of the other two—ability. This means cultivating your own skills to make the finest instrument possible which you can offer to the structure of the world.

"May your strength for the future be reinforced so that it will strengthen all mankind. Good luck and congratulations to the world that waits before you."

Diplomas were presented by Mrs. David L. Wing, president of Madeira. Prayer and benediction were by the Rev. Charles W. Sheerin, rector of the Church of the Epiphany in the District.

Graduates from the Washington area are:

Ninth Drowning Marks Warm Day; Temperature 90

The second drowning of the month, and the ninth of the year, was recorded yesterday as the mercury climbed to 90 degrees at 3:40 p. m. A pleasant breeze and a low humidity with recordings of about 46 per cent made the day fairly comfortable.

Police reported that Henry E. Scott, 16, Negro, of 455 Delaware Avenue Southwest, failed to come to the surface after diving into the Washington Channel at the foot of Fourteeth Street.

Report Claims Curfew Law Wouldn't Work

A curfew law would not solve Washington's juvenile delinquency problem because of the difficulty of enforcement and the fact that repressive measures would not reach the source of the difficulty, it was claimed yesterday by a committee of the Social Hygiene Society.

"Until Washington has provided adequate homes for its children or adequate wholesome recreational activities outside the home, no curfew law will decrease juvenile delinquency," the committee asserted in its report, reached after several months' study. "If the only purpose of a curfew law is to take children off the street, this might be accomplished provided the police force were sufficiently enlarged. But unless the community provides substitute recreational programs to take the place of street activity, we question the desirable effect of a curfew."

These were other findings cited to discourage a curfew: Lack of efficient enforcement of curfew laws would encourage children to disregard other laws; shortage of police personnel and lack of adequate facilities for temporary detention of violators; strictly enforced curfew laws in some communities have driven young people to the outskirts of town where supervision is more difficult; the laws will be obeyed by those who need them least, but evaded by those who need them most; Washington policewomen are already carrying on a continuous program for youth protection in which the best portions of any desirable curfew law are included.

In closing, the committee's report urged that parents and community organizations strive for greater cooperation to solve the problem of juvenile delinquency.

Metropolis View Citizens Elect Mrs. F. G. Sartwell

Mrs. Franklin G. Sartwell last night was elected president of the Metropolis View Citizens Association, the first woman to be so honored by that group.

Other officers elected were W. Earl Pullin, vice president; Mrs. John A. Tondra, secretary; Mrs. Pierce B. Butler, sr., assistant secretary, and Sam Sidotti, reelected treasurer.

The association, in the last meeting of the season adopted resolutions opposing the imposition of a curfew law in the District; approving the bill to elect a voteless delegate from the District to the House of Representatives and one commending their Deputy Air Raid Warden Roland K. Speer for his work in inventing an imitation incendiary bomb, which is now being widely adopted through the United States.

City News in Brief

17 Flee Training School

Seventeen Negroes, 15 boys and 2 girls, escaped from the District Training School for mentally defective children at Laurel, Md., early yesterday, bringing the total escapes from that institution this year to 110.

Dr. James Lewald, superintendent, attributed the escapes to "the unrest of the times and our insufficient personnel." Dr. Lewald stated that he has been unable to fill 48 vacancies and that he has been forced to employ "elderly persons who are sometimes even feeble' to act as attendants.

He pointed out that the largest danger in their being at large is to the children themselves.

Must Report Crashes

Owners and managers of garages and repair shops were reminded yesterday by Police Superintendent Edward J. Kelly that they are bound by Act of Congress to report within 24 hours any motor vehicle brought in for repairs as the result of an accident or bearing evidence of being struck by bullets.

The memorandum stated that "any individual failing to so report shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not less than $25 nor more than $100 for each offense."

They are also requested to notify police immediately of any information about any vehicle wanted by police.

Victory Sidelights

More Fire Auxiliaries Needed Here

The police and fire protecti committe of the Federation of Citizens Associations announced yesterday that 1000 additional auxiliary firemen are needed for Washington's civilian fire protective service. This goal was set in a report issued on the advancement of the civilian defense organization.

"Although the shortage of equipment for the auxiliary firemen has held up the protective services and prevented the program from encompassing the entire city, the committee will extend its work just as soon as more apparatus is received," the report stated.

This progress was disclosed: Forty-five trailer-type pumps are being placed in their stations for theauxiliary firemen. Through the efforts of the Board of Trade, 27 trucks have been obtained suitable for mounting the same number of skid-mount pumps and they are be-in gprepared for their respective stations. An additional training course has been prepared for the personnel who will man the auxiliary equipment.

War Bond Rally

A pageant to raise funds for war bond purchases and to add to the money for the purchase of an ambulance for colored troops will be held at Griffith Stadium tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock by the Colored Grand Chapter, Order of Eastern Star, District of Columbia.

Annoyed Citizens Demand End To Bus Drivers' Night Harmony

Capital Transit Co. bus drivers who haven't made a hit vocally with residents at Fifth and Sheridan Streets Northwest—which has been their "cut-back" terminal on the Petworth line since the reduction in service—will have an opportunity to practice their singing at a new stand.

The company yesterday announced that the terminal would be moved to the north side of Sheridan Street between Fourth and Fifth from its present location on the south side between Fifth and Sixth.

Residents Complain

Residents of the block of the present terminal had complained in a petition that the drivers and their friends frequently burst into song in the wee sma' hours during the long layovers.

The petition was signed by 28 residents of the 500 block of Sheridan Street and the 6200 block of Fifth Street, and hinted that Bacchus might have inspired some of the songfests. It said the drivers have friends who "seem to have a penchant for comforting lonesome bus drivers in relays . . . Usually one bus will be leaving as another arrives so that the little comforters are not left without someone to entertain.

"There is an excessive amount of loud talking and laughing among the bus drivers until 12 and 1 o'clock at night. On several occasions this disturbance was accentuated when the drivers are joined by their friends. It appears necessary to while away the stop-over periods with periodic outbursts of song."

Capital Transit wrote back that "We take pleasure in advising" of the change, "which will, in our opinion, eliminate most of the objections raised. Our transportation officers also are keeping under observation operations in the area for the purpose of assuring that any objectionable actions on the part of our employes are stopped."

So the midnight arias will shift to a new locale, possibly will be stopped, though a Transit Co. spokesman said he hardly thought there would be any purchase of muzzles.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Business Woman From Midwest Visits Her Beau In Washington; They Marry on Spur of the Moment; She Wants Him to Give Up His Job Here; Should He?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My wife and I were married two months ago, here in Washington. Both of us come from distant cities,—my wife from the Middle West and I from the Northeast. I have a good job here that offers chances for advancement. For the past eight years, my wife has been in business in her home town;—and it was there that I met her, during a time when I was employed in that locality. As a matter of fact, I was a paying guest in her mother's home for six months prior to my transfer (and promotion) to this city. During that period, her mother remarked rather often how nice it would be to have me in the family; and occasionally she called me "sonny."

Well, two months ago, Dorothy (my wife) and her sister came here to visit me. It had been understood for some time that Dorothy and I were to be married, but we had no definite plans, although we hoped it would be in the near future. During her stay, we decided one afternoon to get married, and we were married that day. I did not ask her mother's consent, because I had taken for granted that she approved of her daughter's marrying me. But immediately after the ceremony, I suggested calling my mother-in-law and being the first to tell her the news. However, Dorothy and her sister thought it would be best for Dorothy to call. As it happened, Dorothy's sister put through the call, and as she was telling her mother the news, her mother hung up on her, saying she was going to faint.

My wife talked with her mother by telephone the following morning and was told that she (the mother) had fainted twice after getting the news, and had aged 20 years overnight, as a result of what had happened. I gathered my father-in-law was indifferent to the marriage. My wife stayed on here for a week and then returned home. And now my mother-in-law is nursing ill will toward me for "not telling her what my intentions were,"—when I did not definitely know them myself. My wife wants me to request a transfer back to her town, and says that we should live with her mother, who has a large house, and who recently bought some furniture for my wife.

My wife dislikes to leave her mother, for fear of breaking up the home. But I am not inclined to live with my in-laws, for I know there will be friction and mental discomfort for my wife and myself. Also, as I said at first, I have a good job here and the chances for advancement are much better than I would find in her home town. Miss Haworth, what should I do? Is it advisable to go back to my wife's home and try to make up with her family, and do the best I can about a job there? I would rather have my wife here with me, so we could lead our own lives without interference. N. K. M.

Man Is on Tough Spot; The Fat's in the Fire

DEAR N. K. M.: Ordinarily I am no pessimist; but I must in honesty say that this is a marriage that never should have been made;—at least, not until many seemingly insurmountable barriers to a close social partnership program had been thoroughly considered, and some mutually satisfactory home-making plan definitely agreed upon, by you and Dorothy. In the present instance, with the fat already in the fire, you are stepping up to bat with three strikes against you,—in the matter of trying to properly establish yourself as senior partner in the marriage, with the tacitly recognized right to expect your bride to cheerfully make her home in the community where you are employed.

Strike No. 1 is the fact that your bride is,—and obviously intends to continue being,—a well established business woman in her own home town; and that, as a long-time business woman, she probably has a rather inflexibly "executive" mind of her own, and well defined ideas about how she proposes to live her life. Strike No. 2 is the fact of your mother-in-law's deep emotional hostility to the possibility that marriage might take Dorothy out from under her wing,—which tenaciously possessive attitude is responsible alike for (a) her erstwhile "mother hen" encouragement of your matrimonial suit, when you were in the tractable role of star boarder and looked as if you might be a suitable candidate to be brought to heel as an additional member of the family, permanently housed under her roof and subject to her benevolent matriarchal despotism; and (b) her "fainting fits," on learning that Dorothy had become your wife, when you are now independently located thousands of miles away, and when, if the natural course of events were to prevail, that would mean that Dorothy would shut up shop, take leave of the family and throw in her lot with yours, to begin a brand-new life from scratch.

Strike No. 3 is the fact that you are not in a position to argue any practical advantage to Dorothy in giving up her business and her stake in the closed corporation collective-security set-up at home, to join forces with you here. And I imagine Dorothy's mother will exploit that fact to the utmost,—so that even if Dorothy had any sentimental inclination to "risk all for love," she will rapidly be made to feel, under her mother's influencing, that such a step would be preposterously ill-advised; and that she (Dorothy) would be a weak fool to consider it; and you almost knavishly irresponsible and selfish to suggest or encourage it. Thus, yours is the dilemma of being "damned if you do and damned if you don't,"—in the matter of attempting to behave like a man in relation to your new responsibilities as a husband.

Real Man Could Never Be In-Laws' House Pet

One of the inalienable prerogatives of the husband, and one upon which every man of strong character firmly stands, is the social right, legally certified, to expect his wife to loyally "make do" with the best brand of keep he is able to provide. Any man who lets himself be pushed around into expedient compromises on this point, such as might deprive him of self-respecting full authority in his own household (no matter how humble), is less than a man. You, for instance, would be less than a man, if you were to let yourself be sucked back to live under the dominion of your wife's family, for any reason whatsoever. As a real man, you would stand your ground,—on the right to lead and protectively dominate your married life without in-law interference,—even if it meant bluntly rejecting a chance at spectacular job advancement. And when it comes to the question of throwing up a good job with a promising future to go back to be house pet to them,—that would be a shameful betrayal of sense, pride and principle. It would sabotage your last hope of being a real man and enjoying some of the fruits of a real man's existence.

Since this is my appraisal of the psychological factors allied against you on the in-law front, and this my view of your primary duty to yourself,—(and remember the poet's words: "I could not love thee, dear, so much, loved I not honor more,")—you can see why I feel, as I said in the beginning, that this is a marriage that never should have been made; at least, not until some mutually satisfactory homemaking plan had been definitely agreed upon, by you and Dorothy. And why I feel you have permanently forfeited your chance (if you ever had one) of properly establishing yourself as senior partner in the relationship. As for advice,—my recommendation, obviously, is to transplant Dorothy here. But I doubt that you have the magnetic force of character that would bring her, pursuant to a showdown that includes her mother. It is probable that she would settle down to "wait you out" on that score; and maybe sue for divorce if you prove a match for her in stubbornness.

Face These Questions And Find the Answer

I foresee a grave possibility that you may gravitate back to her, in her home town,—because the prospects of material security, for her, would seem to lean heavily in that direction; or so you will tell yourself. But if you take that course, you will have foresworn wholesome happiness in marriage. In time, you will half-hate her and she will half-despise you. So the question is,—What do you want to do? Would you dare be absolutely strong, and possibly win an early total victory over her family, thereby netting a man-sized opportunity to be really happy with her?—or maybe lose her altogether, and therewith cleanse the slate of a wrong beginning? Or would you rather take what you can of her companionship on compromise terms, dictated by her and her mother?—and gradually adapt as best you can to the ignominious fly-in-the-spider's-web fate that awaits you along that road?

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Indian Warfare

(News item—Since 1939, the OPA reports, the cosmetic trade has increased at least 40 per cent.)

I.

Lipsticks are selling furiously,
And why I cannot ken,
The women say it's to keep up
The morale of their men.

II.

But judging from the lips I see,
Also the finger nails,
And in light of what the men profess,
That explanation pales.

III.

It rather seems an Indian trick
Out of the long ago,
The donning of the war paint bright
To frighten off the foe.

In view of the discord among the bigwigs of OPA and other governmental agencies, to say nothing of that existing among the French factions in Africa, Dr. Nannie B. Hopper, noted feminist and clubwoman, believes it is high time to bury forever the old bromide, "Women just can't work together."

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch.)

The wedding of Miss Hortense (Snooksey) Smith-Smythe and Ensign Andy DeForest Bounce, set for early this month, has been postponed until after the war, the bride's mother, Mrs. Sinbad Smith-Smythe announced yesterday.

"It has become impossible to hold a wedding in wartime with the proper appointments, accoutrements and accessories," explained Mrs. Smith-Smythe. "For instance, how can the bride's friends find flat sterling silver for presents? And imagine a couple starting life together with plated ware!"

It is understood Mrs. Smith-Smythe's decision was based on the recent harrowing experience of Miss Rosemary (Ducky) Google and Corpl. Eustace Pall-Mall, who, due to the scarcity of silver selection, received as wedding presents 117 silver candlesticks, 247 bonbon dishes, 49 compotes, also a large assortment of plastic serving trays, cotton tablecloths, glass serving dishes and other nontraditional gifts.

Gardening Togs

Chic costumes for victory gardeners were modeled at a fashion show yesterday in the Babylonian Room of the Hotel Swank. An outfit for directing strawberry pickers was modeled by Mrs. Marcy K. Petitpoint, jr. It included beautifully tailored blue wool slacks, a well-cut rayon blouse accented with a single large ruby strawberry with diamond seeds and a large cartwheel Milan hat.

Miss Celeste Whiffletree and Miss Gloria Gilderlyly modeled play suits of green imported linen and did a dance routine called, "Woman With a Hoe." Miss Valerie Van Peyster wore an old-fashioned garden frock with lace mitts and parasol designed for inspecting the garden.

Mrs. St. John Chinchilla, columnist of the bimonthly Huntstown Bugle, modeled a green and yellow print ensemble for herb gardening, and Mrs. Radcliffe Uppercut showed what the well-dressed gardener should wear when combatting tomato worms.

Blouse and Skirt

By Jeanne Contini

GOOD BLOUSES:—Rosita, Pepita, etc. O'Toole:

Another Mexico-inspired gem in imported white chambray. Its ruffles are embroidered in blue, red, or green, and if looks enchanting without giving the impression that you only just laid down your Maracas. Lovely for warm summer evenings. Caution . . . either flowers in the hair or gold hoop earrings, but not both at the same time unless you want your friends to insist on having their fortunes told. About $6.

P O' THE 'MORNIN':

A blouse to wear to work . . . cool and effective. Made of light spun rayon in a galaxy of luscious colors including black which is as rare as French fried potatoes. This is one good member of a four party scheme to tempt you into buying a number of pieces just for the fun of tossing the colors around. Not a bad idea at that. There's another blouse (a nicely tailored, straight-forward shirt which would be fine with slacks) and two skirts (described below). Blouse, about $4.

TOM SAWYER'S BETSY:

Imported white chambray cut along a delectable old-fashioned pattern. The little frilled collar is gathered on a checked gingham draw-string. While we like the effect of a checked bow-tie, you might substitute colored velvet ribbon or a narrow length of lace, on occasion, depending on the style and color of your skirt. This is washable, of course. About $5.

GOOD SKIRTS:—Queen of Spades:

A skirt of black cotton broad-cloth . . . full, fair, and high-waisted, untainted and aloof from colored fol-de-rols. One of the few cotton skirts that can walk smartly and unabashed about the city. Contrary to common belief, black sets off sun-tanned legs. Apropos, you don't have to fear the effects of cosmetic stockings on this; it's washable. About $4.

THE LAST QUARTER:

Above, we described the two blouses to which this skirt is wedded. It is a modified dirndl in the same spun rayon with a good shape and special virtue embodied in its colors. The sister skirt is a simple box-pleated model. You can compose your own dress in solid color with any two of these elements, or choose your skirt in a dark basic shade which will support the other blouses in your possession and pepper it with brilliant tops. Colors are lilac (wonderful), tomato, black, powder blue, powder brown, and green. About $6.

GAMIN:

Checked gingham with a high, wide, and handsome waistband. It comes black or red and white with white chambray ruffles. A nice partner, we think, for any cotton blouse and right either in or outside the city limits. About $5.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Mothers are in constant confusion about the way to deal with crying. Shall they attend to the baby and thus build up an increasing desire for attention? Shall they ignore the child and let him cry it out?

When a baby wants something, anything, the only way in which he can express that desire is to cry. He can't speak and say, "I'm hungry, I'm cold, my tummy aches"; he can only cry.

The best authorities on child care today agree that the way to develop a spoiled, crying baby is to ignore his cries. Read that over until you take it in, for it is the very opposite of what mothers have been told so often.

The mother is there to listen and attend to the baby's wants. If she shirks her responsibility and ignores his crying, interpreting as she pleases, she develops a crying baby.

If he cries too much, obviously it isn't just to be played with, but is a signal of his distress. Too little food oftener is the cause for crying than any one other factor. Up to six weeks a baby cries when wet or soiled. After that he becomes used to these conditions and does not cry. He cries at wakeful times to have his position changed, to be put where it is light, where he can hear noises, to exercise his desire for companionship.

Crying is a symptom a child is growing, he notices, he has desires which need to be gratified. The parent who heeds her child's cries and does something about them has a good child, not one who cries for more and more attention.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

French toast can have as much dignity as any food that graces a platter if given the creative touch. Here you see the South-of-the-Border version—Mexican Toast and Sausage Balls. The sausage balls are made by combining the meat with fine, dry enriched white bread crumbs. The toast is given special flavor with the addition of tomato to the mixture in which the bread is dipped before frying it

Martha Ellyn

Bread is one of the foods that has not been touched by rationing. This is good luck, for there are many delicious foods that can be prepared from bread slices and crumbs. And enriched white bread gives generously in food value for the small expenditure.

Today there is a new version of the old familiar French toast. It is Mexican Toast and Sausage Balls. One-half pound of sausage helps to make this dish into a food that can be used for morning, noon or night. The recipe for it follows:

MEXICAN TOAST AND SAUSAGE BALLS

Blend ½ cup small, fresh enriched white bread crumbs thoroughly into ¼ pound sausage meat with a fork. Roll mixture into marble-size balls (allow one level teaspoon sausage meat for each ball) and roll in fine dry enriched white bread crumbs. Cook in frying pan until balls are crisp and brown. Keep warm. Drain sausage fat out for frying Mexican toast, made as follows:

Blend ¼ cup condensed tomato soup, ¼ cup water, and 1 egg slightly beaten; dip 4 or 5 slices enriched white bread into mixture. Fry bread on both sides in sausage fat. Serve at once with hot sausage balls.

French toast is a grand dish to vary the breakfast menu. It is simple to prepare but if you do not know how to make it here is a recipe:

FRENCH TOAST

Dip 4 or 6 slices of stale bread in a mixture of 1 slightly beaten egg, 1 cup milk, ¼ teaspoon salt and 2 tablespoons sugar. Soak them well. Cook on a well-greased griddle or skillet. Brown one side, turn the slices and brown the other. Serve the slices hot with jelly or hot apple sauce sprinkled with cinnamon.

A delightful version of French toast is to make it in the waffle iron instead of frying in a skillet. Do it this way:

FRENCH TOAST WAFFLES

Combine 1 beaten egg, ¼ cup milk, 2 tablespoons melted butter and ⅛ teaspoon salt. Cut slices bread into pieces to fit a waffle iron. Coat the bread well in the batter. Toast it on a hot waffle iron.

U. S. Envoy to Cuba And Wife Visit Here

Living in Havana Untouched by the War, Says Chilean-Born Mrs. Spruille Braden

By Patricia Grady

The forthright and hearty United States Ambassador to Cuba, Spruille Braden, and his vivacious Chilean wife have flown up from Havana for a stay in this country, with a Washington stop first on their itinerary.

Arriving here on Sunday, the Ambassador and Mrs. Braden are the house guests of Mr. and Mrs. James Wright in their home on West Bradley Lane in Chevy Chase, Md. Slated for a round of festivities whenever they visit here, the Bradens are keeping their social schedule down to a minimum this time because their plans are "so vague."

Blonde-haired, browned-eyed Mrs. Braden, the former Senorita Maria Humeres del Solar of Santiago, waxes enthusiastic over life in Havana. "You don't feel the war at all, as far as living is concerned," she says in her fluent Spanish-accented English. "Some days we have gone without meat or butter, but there was always chicken and other things. When my daughter, Laurita, was visiting us I apologized for not having any butter. She just laughed at me and said, 'You don't realize, Mother, this is heaven'."

Main thing on the agenda for the Bradens is visiting their children, who are scattered about the East. Patricia will be with them during their travels and will accompany them back to Cuba. She is as enthusiastic about living in Havana as her parents and patterns her life there "as the Romans do"—even to a duenna accompanying her wherever she goes.

Also living at the spacious embassy in Havana is their son, Spruille, jr., who is attending school there now. He will graduate this month and later in the summer will come to the United States. His plans? "They are made for him," explains his mother. "He will soon be of draft age."

Their daughter, Mrs. William H. Lyons and her baby daughter are also making their home at the embassy. Mrs. Lyons' husband is in Miami, Fla., and since apartment houses there refuse to take "children or dogs," Mrs. Lyons has found refuge on the island. Another daughter, Laurita, is in New York and hasn't visited Cuba since Christmas. That makes New York a "must" on the Braden traveling list. Boston is also on this list because that is where Lieut. (j. g.) Bill Braden is stationed.

Ambassador Braden has done a lot for the reputation of businessmen in the diplomatic field. Since he stepped out of his role of a mining corporation executive eight years ago to become a member of the peace commission sent to work on the conciliation in the Chaco and accorded the rank of Ambassador, powerfully built, aggressive-minded Spruille Braden has succeeded in the missions he has been charged with.

Those who know the inside story agree that Envoy Braden deserves the credit for bringing about the peace treaty that was finally signed between Bolivia and Paraguay. Two years later he went to Bogota as our Minister to Colombia, where he again accomplished the spectacular. Setting out to break the power of Scadta, at that time the most strongly entrenched German airline on the continent, he achieved his end by special negotiations with Colombian officials.

It was last spring that Mr. Braden was appointed Ambassador to Cuba, where he has been continuing to augment his outstanding diplomatic record. Before his diplomatic career began he spent some 15 years in the mining business. His father, William Braden, was head of the Braden Copper Corp., which sold out to the Guggenheim companies. One of his major jobs was negotiating the financing and contracts for the electrification of the Chile State Railway and other big electrical companies.

After their arrival on Sunday the Bradens were the dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Keith, who were with them in Bogota. Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley will entertain at a 6 to 8 o'clock party in their honor in the East Room of the Mayflower on Saturday. Miss Patricia Braden is a house guest of the Stanleys and arrived in Washington about a week ago. The Stanley's son, Ensign William Stanley, jr., is attached to our Embassy in Havana.

These Proud Beauties Are in His Pow-uh ! !

And with a twirl of his mustachios the gas-ration man has said, "No gas for pleasure riding"—and so Junior Hostesses Rena Cournyn, Nancy Ryder, Edna Mae Miller and Mary Louise Read had to bicycle to the Stage Door Canteen to make last-minute plans for the benefit that the Willard Roof Music Hall players gave for the Canteen last evening. Entire proceeds of the rootin' tootin' melerdramer of the gay nineties, "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl," went to the Stage Door Canteen, which serves and entertains 1500 service men a night, and has done so for lo, these eight months or more. When caught by the photographer these lassies were cutting out paper mustaches which were sold at the premiere as an aid to those who wished to do their wolfing in the gay '90's villi-an style, and also to aid the Canteen fund

Purely Personal News and Notes

Senora de Michels, wife of the Chilean Ambassador, will entertain at a luncheon on Thursday in honor of Senora de DeBayle, wife of the retiring Ambassador of Nicaragua.

Col. and Mrs. C. C. Jadwin are expected to return to Washington soon after a brief holiday spent in New York and Lakeville, Conn., where their son, Edgar Jadwin 2d, is a student at Hotchkiss School. Colonel Jadwin has just returned to this country after a three-year absence abroad and he and Mrs. Jadwin will be at home at Alban Towers.

Col. Eugenio Silva, on a special military mission from Cuba, and Senora de Silva have returned from a stay in a hunting lodge in the mountains of Maryland. They were hosts at an informal supper party Saturday evening when their guests included a number from the embassy staff and their wives.

Comdr. and Mrs. E. P. Forrestel of North Arlington, Va., will have as their house guest for 10 days their niece, Miss Jeanne Forrestel, who came Friday from Williamsburg, where she is completing her second year at the College of William and Mary. Miss Forrestel, who is the daughter of Comdr. and Mrs. W. J. Forrestel of Honolulu, will return to their home in the fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Krock have arrived from Limestone, their home in Berryville Va., at the Towers of the Waldorf-Astoria in New York, with Mrs. Krock's son, William Blair.

Music Group To Hold Open Forum

Immediately preceding the annual meeting of the Women's Committee for the National Symphony Orchestra, an open forum for all members will be held on Wednesday at 5 p. m. in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building, 1615 H Street Northwest, it was announced this week by Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, chairman of the Women's Committee.

The purpose of the forum, according to Mrs. Howe, is to discuss the achievement of the Women's Committee in regard to the National Symphony; to plan new forms of work in the interest of the orchestra, and to discuss suggestions relative to this; and to weld the committee into a more closely integrated unit.

Final WPA Writer's Project, Now "In the Works," Will Be Published in the Autumn: Result of Plan by WPA Editor Lyle Saxon, Who's Quite an Author on His Own

In a city where nothing is so constant as change, the comings, goings and job shifts of even the most interesting persons is taken as a matter of course. In a word, the ups and downs of bureaucratic mutability being what they are, Washingtonians have learned gracefully to wave goodby to one departing contingent, at the same time a welcoming palm is being extended to another.

However, in the case of one fourth-generation American, who hails from New Orleans and is helping to finish off effects for the moribund WPA, there is still hope that the goodby gesture will not be in order . . . even after his current job is completed.

The person in question is Lyle Saxon, widely known author, whose work with the WPA Writer's Project has been a distinctive contribution in the field of letters and current information. At present, Saxon is assisting George Field, Deputy Administrator of the WPA in editing final reports of all WPA activities from 48 States.

"And when that is finished, Mr. Saxon—what next?" I asked him the other day.

"No telling," he answered in liquid tones that are a dead giveaway of his Louisiana background. "There are several things I'd admire to do, but I'd rather not talk about them now."

Far as I could make out, Saxon would rather not talk about himself on any score. About New Orleans? Well, that's different. Just get him started on almost any phase of the city he knows inside-out and round about—the city, incidentally, to which one of his books lent considerable luster—and he's off on a wordy binge that will keep you enchanted for hours.

LYLE SAXON

Has Home in Old French Quarter

Just mention the old French Quarter, and immediately you'll start on a Saxon-conducted tour of one of America's most fascinating sections. For 25 years he has led a campaign to preserve that quarter. He has taken infinite pains to restore two old houses there—one of which he calls "home," even though when he returns to New Orleans he usually hangs his own particular hat in an apartment at the St. Charles Hotel.

But the house mentioned is known as "Saxon's home" because that's generally where he puts up visiting friends. They are many; practically continuous in their New Orleans appearances; and each one vows after a visit there that nobody in his right mind will stay away a minute longer than necessary.

"Saxon's home is a kind of annex to Washington's Walker-Johnson Building," someone observed recently, "just as Roark Bradford's place is a 'New Orleans Hotel Mayflower.' Both Bradford and Saxon entertain a steady stream of guests. Talk about Southern hospitality—those boys and their friends really know what it means."

John Steinbeck was married in the courtyard of the Saxon home a few months ago. Steinbeck and Saxon are friends of long standing, and their friends and friends' friends flocked to New Orleans in droves for the wedding. Arranging the whole thing, and planning a continuous round of gala fetes before and after the ceremony was—so everybody there agreed—quite in keeping with the Saxon tradition of hospitality.

Saxon's country home, located at Melrose Plantation, was once a hospital for slaves. It is now headquarters for a collection of interesting items concerning Negroes prior to the Civil War. Included are numerous Negro ancestral portraits, documents on slavery, maps and slave-made furniture.

"When I die, I'm going to leave the whole thing to some museum," Saxon said. "I think lots of people might find some of that stuff particularly interesting."

From what I've heard of the "stuff" most anybody would; but no matter how interesting it is, it can't be any more so than the books in the WPA's American Guide Series to which Saxon has given so much attention the past eight years.

A Washingtonian told me the other day that the most valuable possession he ever hoped to have was a complete set of that series. "It'll be worth $50,000 twenty years from now," he said. "Even now, full sets are mighty hard to find." Saxon has worked on many of those volumes, but the two in which he naturally takes greatest pride are "The New Orleans City Guide" and "The Louisiana Guide," which he edited down to the final period.

Countless writers and research workers have used the New Orleans guide book to advantage. Edna Ferber drew on it heavily for background material for "Saratoga Trunk."

"I used to be a newspaperman, myself." That line is tossed out frequently around Washington. "I've heard it from a least half the persons now drawing pay checks from Uncle Sam, Lyle Saxon is one who could say it, with reason and pride . . . but doesn't. As I hinted before, he's a modest man; talks about himself as little as possible.

From Journalist to Author

It's a matter of record, however, that he worked for newspapers in several cities, and that he was on the staff of the New Orleans Times-Picayune in 1926 when he decided to take the plunge every reporter dreams of getting around to, someday. He resigned to devote his entire time to writing.

First time I ever heard of Lyle Saxon was back in 1928, when his book, "Fabulous New Orleans," hit the best-seller list. Then I learned his "Father Mississippi" had done the same thing a year before. His other books, all of which increased his reading public, include "Old Louisiana," "Lafitte, the Pirate;" and "Children of Strangers." He has also written for numerous magazines and his short stories have been in several "prize" collections.

Recently completed and now with the publisher is the book on Louisiana folklore which Saxon planned and edited and on which he did much of the writing as part of a WPA Writer's Project.

"It's what you might call my final WPA fling," he said. "In fact it was so final, it didn't even have to go through the WPA censor."

"Which fact," added one of Saxon's friends, "should help its sale mightily. Truth is, it's one of the raciest . . . and rarest . . . manuscripts I've ever read."

Noted Visitor From Brazil Tours Country

Off on the dizzy whirl of a swift tour around the country is Dr. Oswaldo R. Cabral of Brazil, who spent last week in Washington at the invitation of the State Department.

Dr. Cabral, who is director of Assistencia Municipal, the municipal social service of Santa Catarina, Brazil, has come to the United States to make a two-month tour of the country—with the purpose, as he himself expresses it, of "getting acquainted with the life of the people seeing the United States in its daily life."

His itinerary includes, therefore, not only universities, museums and hospitals in leading cities, but also numerous informal side trips. He is interested especially in the Negro and Indian groups in this country.

Leaves New York On Thursday

Now in New York, he will leave there on Thursday for Niagara Falls, thence to Chicago, and then San Francisco, Los Angeles, Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado and to St. Louis, Mo. At St. Louis he will take a river boat for the trip down the Mississippi to New Orleans, and will leave the United States via Miama, Fla., on August 4.

Dr. Cabral is acting president of the Brazil-United States Cultural Institute at Florianopolis, an organization dedicated to bringing about closer friendship and better understanding between Brazilians and North Americans. Organized last year, it has an active and enthusiastic membership.

One of the institute's most popular projects is teaching English classes, which have at present an enrollment of 243 including students, teachers, physicians, housewives, businessmen, and many Brazilian army and navy officers.

The institute also has a well-attended class in radio telegraphy, and a growing library of books in English and Portuguese. It also gives frequent showings of documentary motion pictures on different aspects of life and progress in the United States.

Travels Now To Be Guide Later

The record of Dr. Cabral's travels in this country will be preserved in the book that he is writing. It will give not only his own interpretations and reactions to what he sees but will serve as "an intellectual guidebook" to future visitors.

The book will have three chief divisions: Highways of America (impressions of the trip itself), Cities of America (communal and civic life and organization), and Friends in America (people seen and remembered). Dr. Cabral is illustrating the book with his own pen-and-ink sketches and photographs of places visited.

His principal published works to date are a "History of Santa Catarina," a textbook on hygiene, a study of the Jesuits in Santa Catarina, several volumes of essays, and a work on "Medicine, Physicians and Charlatans of the Past," which tells the story of primitive and scientific medicine in Brazil.

Following the ceremony at the home of the bride's mother, the couple will leave for a wedding trip, after which they will go to Mexico to make their home.

Mrs. Roosevelt Heads List Of Patrons

An illuminating cross-section of the many Washingtonians interested in promoting a closer acquaintance and understanding between China and the United States is represented in the list of patrons for the Chinese art exhibit opening tomorrow at the United War Relief Center.

Heading the list is Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Wei Tao-ming.

Others prominent on the list are Justice and Mrs. Stanley F. Reed and from Capitol Hill, Representatives Edith Nourse Rogers, Clare Boothe Luce and Walter Judd.

Also acting as sponsors are Dr. and Mrs. T. V. Soong, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Chu Shih-ming, Mr. and Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin R. Finkenstaedt, Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Aspinwall, Mrs. Robert Lowe Bacon, Mrs. William Borah, and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck.

Bride-Elect Plans Party

In honor of the out-of-town guests who will attend her wedding on Thursday afternoon to Ensign Graham Montrose Clark, U. S. N., Miss Jane Arleigh Blue will entertain at a buffet supper tomorrow evening. The affair will take place in the garden at the home of her parents, Col. and Mrs. Frank S. Blue at 6318 Connecticut Avenue, Chevy Chase, Md.

Yesterday at noon Miss Blue entertained the bridesmaids who will participate in the wedding at a luncheon in the home of her parents.

Noted Mexican Professor Visits Washington

Dr. Antonio Castro Leal, professor of international law and Mexican literature of the National University of Mexico, will be presented in a lecture on "A Panorama of Modern Mexican Poetry" at the Pan American Union Wednesday evening at 9 o'clock. Invitations have been issued by Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general, and Dr. Pedro de Alba, assistant director of the Union.

Dr. Castro Leal has been in the Capital for some time as a guest of the State Department, and he has also visited a number of other war centers. He is recognized as an authority on Mexican and Spanish-American literature, and represented Mexico at the Havana Conference on Intellectual Cooperation in 1941 and at the Conference on Progressive Education at Ann Arbor, Mich., the same year.

One of his most spectacular publications was the "black book," a work of European writers, which he edited, having to do with the Nazi regime in Europe. Dr. Castro Leal plans a larger edition in the near future, and a wider distribution in Mexico and South America.

Interesting modern trends of Mexican poetry will be described by the Mexican writer in his Wednesday evening lecture.

Supreme Court Clears Registrant Draft Board Missed by Mail

By Edward H. Higgs
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Supreme Court ruled yesterday that a draft registrant satisfied the requirements of keeping his draft board informed of his whereabouts when he provides a chain of forwarding addresses through which he can reasonably expect to receive an induction notice in time to report for service.

The 7-2 decision, delivered by Justice Reed, upset the conviction of Homer Lester Bartchy, Houston, Tex., on a charge that he knowingly failed to keep his draft board advised of the address where mail could reach him.

Barachy, who joined the Merchant Marine while his induction was imminent, contended that he had told his draft board that an induction notice sent to the National Maritime Union in Houston would reach him. He later went to New York, and, he said, told the union office there that he was expecting a letter from the board.

Then he went aboard ship, remained there for two weeks while the vessel was being repaired. The board, meantime, sent an induction order to Bartchy's former Houston address, and it was subsequently forwarded to the Maritime Union and then to New York. The New York office, believing Bartchy had sailed, sent the notice back to the board. Bartchy contended that if the board had sent the notice to the Maritime Union in Houston originally he would have received it before he went aboard ship.

In another case affecting military service, the court held that legislation providing postponement of civil suits involving soldiers or sailors should be "liberally construed," but that it does not apply to a soldier stationed in Washington when the evidence indicates he has not sought a leave from service to defend himself in the court.

The decision, the first by the court interpreting the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act, had the effect of upholding a North Carolina court judgment of $11,450 against Maj. Daniel F. Boone, formerly of Winston-Salem, later stationed in Washington. Boone contended the trial should have been postponed because his duties prevented him from appearing in court.

Observing that Boone apparently had not applied for a leave, the high tribunal said that "in some few cases absence (from court) may be a policy, instead of the result of military service and discretion is vested in the courts to see that the immunities of the act are not put to such unworthy use."

Justice Black, dissenting, said he feared that the decision "seriously limits" the benefits that Congress intended to provide under the act.

"It apparently gives the act a liberal construction for the benefit of creditors rather than for the benefit of soldiers," Justice Black said

In other opinions yesterday, the Court:

Upheld the National Labor Relations Board in directing the Virginia Electric & Power Co. to return to employes money deducted from their wages as dues to a union which the board charged was dominated by the company.

Reaffirmed a previous opinion upholding the constitutionality of legislation putting a 49-cent-per-bushel penalty on wheat produced in excess of AAA quotas. The legislation had been challenged anew by Representative Lemke (Republican), North Dakota, on behalf of a group of farmers.

Sustained the conviction of William R. Johnson, whom Justice Frankfurter described as a "gambler on a magnificent scale" in Chicago, on charges of evading Federal income taxes for 1936 to 1939. The decision also upheld the conviction of four other men accused of aiding Johnson to evade the taxes.

Held that the Federal wage-hour law does not apply to a cook who serves meals to maintenance of way emplyoes of an interstate railroad. The court declared that even though the cook's employer may be engaged in interstate commerce "it is the work of the employe which is decisive."
